A few months ago Federal Prohibition enforcement agents raided the saloon of Michels and seized a small quantity of whiskey found in a bread box in a room adjoining the barroom.

WHISKERS THE ONLY REQUISITE

Without Them No Player is Eligible For Either Chamber of Commerce or Farm Bureau Nine to Play at Forsyth Park Picnic.

One feature of the Farm Bureau picnic in Forsyth Park on Wednesday, August 31, will be a baseball game such as was never seen on sea or land. It will be between nines representing the Chamber of Commerce and the Farm Bureau, no Farm Bureau member residing in the city eligible to play on the team and nobody to be eligible to play on either team unless he has whiskers, real genuine, attached, natural growth, dyed-in-the-wool whiskers that won't come off.

The Kingston police and the state troopers will be mobilized for the support and protection of the umpire, part of whose duties will be to pass in the genuineness and sufficiency of the whiskers.

The Chamber of Commerce has already struck terror to the hearts of the Farm Bureau by offering John E. Mahar the job of selecting and captaining the city players. There being many trees in Forsyth Park, Mr. Mahar is expected to selece a nine of expert players, who can be trained to elaborate on his justly famous double play which he invented and exemplified in Poughkeepsie last year.

It is expected that during the game even the cider mill and the hot dog stand will be deserted.

SHOPMEN ISSUE DEFI TO BOARD

Will Strike Before Accepting Piece Work System or Cutting Out of Time and Half for Overtime—Pennsy Strike Sentiment Wanes.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Chicago, Aug. 10.—Defying the railroads to establish the piece work system of shop work, representatives of the Federated Shop Crafts of thirty-three eastern railroads today declared that an immediate walkout would follow orders by the United States railroad board sanctioning either the piece work system or abolishing time and a half for overtime.

Philadelphia, Aug. 10.—The threatened strike of Pennsylvania Railroad shopmen is waning as the day grows older and the railroad management shows no sign of receding from its stand in refusing to recognize the decree of the railroad labor board.

Union leaders now say that shopmen will not strike but will leave the matter to public opinion.

SMALL FIRE ON WASHINGTON AVE.

Roof Blaze At No. 171 Put Out Before Fire Apparatus, Blocked By Autos Of Fire Fans, Is Able To Reach Scene.

An alarm of fire was rung in from box 92, corner of Washington avenue and Main street at 12:30 o'clock today. The bell in the fire station on Fair street rang the nine but failed to ring two and the large crowd which always runs to a fire was at a loss to know where to go until the fire apparatus started, the small bell in the engine room having registered the 92.

Wiltwyck Hose went out Main street to Johnston avenue closely followed by the hook and ladder truck and Four Hose which was towed by a Ford car. At the end of Main street there was no apparent fire and the fire trucks attempted to turn and come back up Main street to Washington avenue and south to where the fire was. The way was blocked with at least a hundred automobiles and several hundred pedestrians who has closely followed the fire apparatus getting in the way and delaying the work of the firemen. Officer Soper was on the job and straightened out the traffic and started the firemen on their way.

The fire was on the roof of the double house at 169-171 Washington avenue occupied by Geo. Teller and Kearn Kenney, where a new roof is being put on. The blaze which was extinguished by Mr. Teller without apparent damage was on the roof of 171 Washington avenue which is occupied by Kearn Kenney.

There are numerous automobilists who immediately an alarm of fire is sounded start to race the fire apparatus to the fire and are constantly getting in the way of the apparatus, and endangering the lives of themselves as well as the firemen. At each intersecting street more and more cars are added to the procession until, as in the case today, they become a nuisance and in case of a big blaze might delay the firemen causing serious loss of property.

ROSE STARS IN FORSYTH TENNIS

His Steadiness Offsets Erratic Brilliance of Hasbrouck—Purdy Wins Right to Meet MacFadden.

The largest gallery of the tennis tournament at Forsyth Park turned out Tuesday to see the feature match of the day between the two former boys' champions, R. Rose and K. Hasbrouck. In both sets Hasbrouck took an early lead by hard driving and wonderful overhead work but each time he became erratic and succumbed to Rose's deadly lobs to the base line. Rose was especially steady in pinches, making some beautiful returns on what looked like certain placements. The sets went to Rose 9-7, 6-4. Preceding this match Rose defeated Bernholz 6-3, 6-1.

Another hard fought contest came when D. Purdy and R. Southwick crossed rackets for the right to meet D. MacFadden in the semifinals. Purdy took the first set when he broke through his opponent's fast service, 11-9. In the second set Southwick steadied down, winning 6-4. The third set and match went to Purdy 6-3.

In the boys' singles A. Flanigan advanced to the semi-finals over B. Miller, 6-4, 6-4. Both men played a steady base-line game with Flanigan having the edge in accuracy.

The men's doubles got underway when Rose and Hasbrouck smashed their way to a 6-0, 6-0 victory over Gill and Smith.

The drawings for the men's doubles are as follows:—Talbot-MacFadden (bye), Marine-Whiston and Slater-Smith, Stelle-Southwick and Mahar-Bernholz, Purdy-Clearwater and Flanigan-Herzog, Ewing-Miller and Muellion-McCauliff, Smith-Gill and Rose-Hasbrouck, Broadie-Edwards and Linson-Safford, Schoonmaker-McCauliff (bye). These matches must be concluded by Thursday.

To effect this so called "clean up" of cases, the bureau has created in each state a "clean up squad," consisting of a medical examiner, a compensation and claims contract examiner and a member of the district manager's office of the Red Cross staff who will act as publicity and advance agent.

The time of arrival of the "clean up squad" at the armory in Kingston is at present uncertain but it is expected they will sit here about the second week in September. Ample notice will be given through the press of the city and county and in the meantime the preliminary work is to locate all the sick and disabled ex-service men.

GEORGE LOWTHER NOT YET FOUND

West Shore Conductor Took Way Freight To Ravena, Got Shave and Hair Cut and Then Disappeared—Bloodhounds Aid Troopers And Rail Men In Search.

The many friends of George Lowther of 282 Hasbrouck avenue, a freight train conductor on the West Shore railroad, and his wife, are mystified over his sudden disappearance from his home and employment. Monday morning he left this city on the way freight for Ravena at 8:45 o'clock, and the train and crew arrived there between 4 and 5 o'clock it being the end of the run. A short time later according to the story of some of the crew Mr. Lowther spoke of going after blackberries and nothing more was thought of his going away until Tuesday morning when he failed to show up for his run south at 7:45. Inquiry failed to locate him and fearing that he might perhaps fallen into some hole, been waylaid, or met with some mishap the State Troopers were notified and a search instituted, railroad men in Ravena taking part. Box cars were searched thinking that perhape he might have been taken ill and had gone into one, but no trace had been found of him up to noon today, according to employes at the West Shore station here and at the yard office. This morning bloodhounds were sent out in an effort to find if possible a trail of the missing man and another search of box cars made. It was learned, however, that Conductor Lowther had gone Monday afternoon to a barber shop at Ravena and got a shave and a haircut.

When he went away he wore his overalls, and had left his gold watch, his wallet containing money, and his laundry and other articles behind in the caboose where the members of the train crew slept and eat when away from Kingston. These articles were sent to this city, Tuesday night and this morning and were turned over to his wfe.

Mrs. Lowther is ill with grief over the mysterious disappearance of her husband, who received his pay Saturday the greater part of which it is said he left at home, so if he was held up and robbed as may be possible by someone who thought he had his two weeks' pay, they could not have gotten much.

Conductor Lowther has been on the West Shore a long period of years, aged about 50 years, with many friends, and was in good health.

FREEMAN FINDS SCHIMECK FAMILY AND GETS TRUTH OF AMAZING "JACK BROWN" MYSTERY

"JACK BROWN" FOUND, INSISTS "HE'S" A MAN

Female Lover of Mary Holdowanetz Located Working With Men at Monticello Boarding House Baffles Inquirers.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Monticello, N. Y., Aug. 10.—Who "done wrong" to pretty, blue-eyed, trusting Mary Holdowanetz?

"Not I," said Jack Brown, a farm hand, here today.

Mary caused a country-wide sensation yesterday, when she sprang a regular "Mademoiselle de Maupin" story of how a girl named Carolyn Schimeck had deceived her into believing her a man—her man, at that and made love to her for two years with promises of marriage.

"Jack Brown" was the pseudonym of the young lover. Mary says, and she found out to her sorrow that "Jack" had been spoofing her.

But when reporters found "Jack Brown" working as a farm hand on the Kutcher farm here today, he insisted he was plain Jack Brown, without any quotation marks, and that he had made love to Mary as any gentleman might, but that "nothing came of it."

Jack is working among men on the farm and living in a room with four other hands, and to all appearances is what he says he is. He hasn't much beard, but during his courtship of Mary, the latter says, he told her he used a preparation to take off the hair so that he needn't shave.

"I'm from Tillery, North Carolina," said Jack today, "I came north three years ago. I admit I asked Mary to marry me but nothing came of it. I don't know why she should want to sue me.

"My name is just Brown, and I never heard the name of Carolyn Schimeck before."

New York, Aug. 10.—"Jack Brown" may insist he is just plain Jack Brown, but Mary Noldowanetz, who believes she has been badly fooled in the great love affair of her life is not going to be stung a second time.

"It's a girl," says Mary.

Mary has ardent love letters from Jack, and later letters from a Carolyn Schimeck, of Kingston, N. Y., referring to a mutal love affair, and to her "brother Jack" who has gone away. She also has a letter from Carolyn's brother, Edwin asking her to send back the ring Carolyn gave her.

This ring, she says, was given her by "Jack" as an engagement ring.

Mary says that she doesn't care what the "Jack Brown" at Monticello may say about his sex or the affair, she knows now, for she "was convinced."

"When I found out it was Carolyn, not Jack" said Mary, "she cried and said she couldn't bear to tell me the truth. She got the idea of playing boy when she was conductorette on the Delancy Street cars."

Mary doesn't care what becomes of "Jack" now, but she seeks redress because she wasted her time, and might have married some one else.

He wasn't her man, but it was wrong, anyhow.

Carved With Own Razor.

Melvin McBee, a negro, was brought to the City of Kingston Hospital in a taxi about midnight Tuesday night by James Tracey, to be treated for a cut which McBee said had been inflicted by someone he did not know, on Chambers street. He said his own razor had been taken from him and used to do the cutting. As the wound was trivial, McBee did not need much attention and left soon afterward. It was rumored down town this morning that the carving was done by a woman.

Their Daughter Caroline, Strong and With Preference For Male Attire, Now Waitress at Monticello, Is "Man" Who Wooed and Won New York Girl and Was Found Out When Girl Came to Sawkill Home—Family Lives Just Across Viaduct.

Filled with an idea since childhood that she should have been a boy instead of a girl, Caroline Schimeck, twenty-three years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Schimeck of the town of Ulster, for three years has posed as a man with the exception of four months of this year when she lived with her parents at Sawkill, during which time she dressed in girl's clothes but finally become tired of them, again donned man's attire and before daybreak one morning early in May disappeared.

Her family received a letter from her on Tuesday stating that she was employed at the boarding house of Kutcher Brothers at Monticello but that she had been ill and was unable to send any money to the family. Almost at the same time Mary Holdowanetz, employed as a waitress at the Oakland Lunch at 2,139 Lexington avenue, New York city, was applying in the Harlem Court in New York city for a warrant for the arrest of Caroline, who she said had kept company with her for two years under the name of "Jack Brown" and had proposed marriage to her. At about the same time Caroline's father, unable to support his family of a wife and seven children on the meagre wages which he had been receiving in operating a sewing machine for one of the skirt manufacturers in Rondout, was starting from Kingston for New York city in search of work. The Freeman Tuesday evening carried telegraph news of Mary's application for a warrant for the arrest of "Jack Brown."

The story as related to a Freeman reporter this morning by Mrs. Schimeck is one of the most remarkable that has developed in many years.

The Schimeck family came to the United States from Stanislau, Galicia, thirteen years ago. They went to North Carolina, where two older brothers of Mrs. Schimeck had already settled and engaged in farming. The older brother still is there and is prosperous. The second older brother, was unable to make much more than his ordinary expenses and about a month ago, according to Mrs. Schimeck, he became insane as the result of a fever he had sometime before, and was committed to a North Carolina institution.

The Schimeck family left North Carolina about seven years ago because they were unable to make a living wage. Mrs. Schimeck worked for the younger of her two brothers for thirty cents a day. Her husband also worked hard but did not receive enough money for living expenses in view of the growing size of the family. He went to Brooklyn and secured employment.

Three years ago Caroline, or Lena, as her family call her, decided definitely to don man's clothing and go to work. She was tall and broad shouldered, but she had a decidedly soft and feminine face. She made the acquaintance of a man named Willie O'Brien, said Mrs. Schimeck, and he induced her to cut her hair short. After that she secured employment with the Brooklyn Rapid Transit railroad system and worked as a laborer. Because of the talk among neighbors when she appeared sometimes in man's clothing and sometimes wearing dresses, the family moved from place to place. Most of the time Lena lived apart from them but finally she announced she was going to marry O'Brien. When O'Brien came to the house, the family decided he was too old to marry Lena. He appeared to be about forty years old and Lena was only twenty years old. Schimeck protested to Lena but she continued to talk about marrying him until a woman who claimed to be O'Brien's wife appeared at their home one day with two children of whom she said O'Brien was the father. After that Lena stopped going with O'Brien but she maintained her man's clothing. She also changed her job.

For two summers, dressed as a man, Lena, was employed at the Kutcher boarding house from early spring until late in the fall. The Kutchers believed and apparently still believe that she is a man. When she first secured work there they explained to her that she was such a young "boy," they could not pay her much, and offered her $30 a month and her board. But the "boy" quickly displayed such ability to work that she was set at work on the farm, digging ditches and performing other manual labor which the men employed on the place could not do without help. Lena, however, performed all tasks without assistance. During the summer she acted as a waiter and tips from summer boarders added considerably to the meagre wages paid by the boarding house proprietors.

In the hope of getting Lena to give up her desire to work and dress like a man, the family about a year ago began looking for some small farm where they could also live to better advantage than in the crowded city. They saw an Ulster county farm advertised and came to Kingston. The real estate agent told them there was plenty of work to be obtained and life on the farm would be easy and he showed them a place at Sawkill. They moved to Sawkill but work was not easy to find.

In January Lena arrived at Sawkill. She was dressed as a man and said she was willing to work. It always had been her wish, she said, to own and work on a farm, and she thought she could get her uncle at Tillery, North Carolina, to help her. He, however, did not have funds and the other uncle said he could not advance money for the farm unless the family also had money to put in it. Lena sought work in Sawkill. The Rev. Father Vaeth, pastor of St. Ann's Church, where the family attended irregularly, learned that Lena was a girl and promptly made an investigation. He made inquiries of Lena, who displayed letters signed by an official whose name he does not recall, granting permission to Lena to wear man's clothing on account of war work which she was doing. The letter was written during the war. He told her the war was over and she must not go about Sawkill dressed as a man. To a Freeman reporter this morning Father Vaeth said he had given Lena odd jobs around the rectory and she had proved herself a hard worker and displayed talent for good housekeeping. She worked there altogether about ten days.

Lena was persuaded by Father Vaeth and her family to discard man's clothing and attire herself in dresses. She talked constantly of wanting to be a man, but her parents told her that was impossible and that she could, if she wished, work just as hard as a man without being dressed like one. Father Vaeth did not learn of Lena's adventures in New York or the search which was made for her in this vicinity by the New York waitress until late in the spring, after Lena had again disappeared.

In March, an automobile appeared at Sawkill one day containing a well dressed young woman accompanied by a trained nurse and began making inquiries for "Jack Brown." No such person was known there, but the young woman continued her search, going from house to house and finally came to the Schimeck house where she discovered the object of her search, dressed as a woman.

The visiting stranger, who proved to be Mary Holdowanetz, asked for an explanation and "Jack" explained that she was a woman. Mrs. Schimeck does not recall all that took place, except that the family learned that while Lena had been masquerading as a man she had met Mary, the waitress, and had proposed marriage. Mary said she had searched for "Jack," making Saugerties her headquarters, and had spent nearly all of her savings of $400 in the search—money she had intended to use in furnishing their home when she married "Jack."

Both Mary and Lena were much attached to each other, said Mrs. Schimeck. Mary insisted that she had the marriage license with her and even though Lena was a girl and not the "Jack" of her dreams, she insisted she wanted to marry "him." Lena joined with her parents in explaining that marriage was impossible, and said she had left Mary when the latter began to insist on marriage. She told Mary that she wanted to save money to buy a farm, that she could earn more money as a man and could work harder if dressed in man's clothing, but marriage was out of the question. Besides, Lena explained, if she continued to keep company with Mary she would continue to spend all her earnings on her and would not be able to save anything.

Mary remained over night at the house and the following day returned to New York.

Late in March the Schimeck family removed from Sawkill to the old Johnson property, the second house on the right on the Kingston-West Hurley road after passing over the Kingston bridge. During the winter months Lena had spent her time in knitting and crocheting and her mother, in the hope of getting the idea of wearing man's clothes out of her head, had helped her. One day Lena dressed up in a Gypsy costume which she had brought with her from New York and posed in the sunlight outside the house for a picture. Afterward her father asked her if she was not better satisfied to be a girl than a boy, and said he did not believe she was strong enough to do man's work. To prove her strength, Lena gave him a tap on the chest which sent him spinning.

On the night of the first of April Mr. and Mrs. Schimeck were awakened from their sleep by hearing some one walking in their room. Mr. Schimeck turned on his flashlight and discovered Lena in the room. She complained of feeling ill but said she did not want anything. Mr. Schimeck at that time was doing farm work which required him to get up at four o'clock in the morning and he left the house at that hour. When Mrs. Schimeck and the children later awoke, they discovered that Lena

SHOPMEN ISSUE DEFI TO BOARD

Will Strike Before Accepting Piece Work System or Cutting Out of Time and Half for Overtime—Penney Strike Sentiment Wanes.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Chicago, Aug. 10.—Defying the railroads to establish the piece work basis of shop work, representatives of the Federated Shop Crafts of thirty-three eastern railroads today declared that an immediate walkout would follow orders by the United States railroad board sanctioning either the piece work system or abolishing time and a half for overtime.

Philadelphia, Aug. 10.—The threatened strike of Pennsylvania Railroad shopmen is waning as the day grows older and the railroad management shows no sign of receding from its stand in refusing to recognize the decree of the railroad labor board.

Union leaders now say that shopmen will not strike but will leave the matter to public opinion.

SMALL FIRE ON WASHINGTON AVE.

Roof Blaze At No. 171 Put Out Before Fire Apparatus, Blocked By Autos Of Fire Fans, Is Able To Reach Scene.

An alarm of fire was rung in from box 92, corner of Washington avenue and Main street at 12:30 o'clock today. The bell in the fire station on Fair street rang the nine but failed to ring two and the large crowd which always runs to a fire was at a loss to know where to go until the fire apparatus started, the small bell in the engine room having registered the 92.

Wiltwyck Hose went out Main street to Johnston avenue closely followed by the hook and ladder truck and Four Hose which was towed by a Ford car. At the end of Main street there was no apparent fire and the fire trucks attempted to turn and come back up Main street to Washington avenue and south to where the fire was. The way was blocked with at least a hundred automobiles and several hundred pedestrians who has closely followed the fire apparatus getting in the way and delaying the work of the firemen. Officer Soper was on the job and straightened out the traffic and started the firemen on their way.

The fire was on the roof of the double house at 169-171 Washington avenue occupied by Geo. Teller and Kearn Kenney, where a new roof is being put on. The blaze which was extinguished by Mr. Teller without apparent damage was on the roof of 171 Washington avenue which is occupied by Kearn Kenney.

There are numerous automobilists who immediately an alarm of fire is sounded start to race the fire apparatus to the fire and are constantly getting in the way of the apparatus, and endangering the lives of themselves as well as the firemen. At each intersecting street more and more cars are added to the procession until, as in the case today, they become a nuisance and in case of a big blaze might delay the firemen causing serious loss of property.

ROSE STARS IN FORSYTH TENNIS

His Steadiness Offsets Erratic Brilliance of Hasbrouck—Purdy Wins Right to Meet MacFadden.

The largest gallery of the tennis tournament at Forsyth Park turned out Tuesday to see the feature match of the day between the two former boys' champions, R. Rose and K. Hasbrouck. In both sets Hasbrouck took an early lead by hard driving and wonderful overhead work but each time he became erratic and succumbed to Rose's deadly lobs to the base line. Rose was especially steady in pinches, making some beautiful returns on what looked like certain placements. The sets went to Rose 9-7, 6-4. Preceding this match Rose defeated Bernholz 6-3, 6-1.

Another hard fought contest came when D. Purdy and R. Southwick crossed rackets for the right to meet D. MacFadden in the semifinals. Purdy took the first set when he broke through his opponent's fast service, 11-9. In the second set Southwick steadied down, winning 6-4. The third set and match went to Purdy 6-2.

In the boys' singles A. Flanican advanced to the semi-finals over B. Miller, 6-4, 6-4. Both men played a steady base-line game with Flanigan having the edge in accuracy.

The men's doubles got underway when Rose and Hasbrouck smashed their way to a 6-0, 6-0 victory over Gill and Smith.

The drawings for the men's doubles are as follows:—Talbot-MacFadden (bye). Marine-Whiston and Slater-Smith. Stelle-Southwick and Mahar-Bernholz. Purdy-Clearwater and Flanigan-Herzog. Ewing-Miller and Macllion-McCaulliff. Smith-Gill and Rose-Hasbrouck. Broadie-Edwards and Lipson-Safford. Schoonmaker-McCaulliff (bye). These matches must be concluded by Thursday.

Kingston Phase of War Risk Insurance Clean-up Campaign Begins and Those With Claims Are Again Urged to Get in Touch With Local Officials.

The bureau of war risk insurance has begun a nation wide campaign to reach every veteran of the world war who is in any way entitled to benefits under the war risk insurance act. The immediate purpose of the campaign is to advise all ex-service persons of their rights under the act to assist those disabled in securing compensation, medical treatment and hospital care, inform and assist all claimants regarding the procedure necessary in filing a claim for compensation and to aid those whose claims are pending to secure final action where additional evidence is necessary to connect their disability with service. Immediate physical examinations are to be provided when necessary and hospitalization will be promptly furnished in urgent cases.

The bureau has asked the cooperation of the Red Cross and Kingston Post, No. 150, of the American Legion, in this movement in Kingston city and Ulster county and the entire resources of these organizations have been placed at the disposal of the bureau.

To effect this so called "clean up" of cases, the bureau has created in each state a "clean up squad," consisting of a medical examiner, a compensation and claims contract examiner and a member of the district manager's office of the Red Cross staff who will act as publicity and advance agent.

The time of arrival of the "clean up squad" at the armory in Kingston is at present uncertain but it is expected they will sit here about the second week in September. Ample notice will be given through the press of the city and county and in the meantime the preliminary work is to locate all the sick and disabled ex-service men.

This is a golden opportunity for any ex-service man who has a claim to be filed or pending against the government. They are asked to fill in the blank below and send it to the Red Cross office, No. 44 Main street, Kingston, N. Y.

By sending this information to the Red Cross their claim can be assisted before the arrival of the "clean up squad" and a personal notice of the arrival of the squad can be sent each one. Bring your discharge certificate and any other papers relating to your case.

GEORGE LOWTHER NOT YET FOUND

West Shore Conductor Took Way Freight To Ravena, Got Shave and Hair Cut and Then Disappeared—Bloodhounds Aid Troopers And Rail Men In Search.

The many friends of George Lowther of 282 Hasbrouck avenue, a freight train conductor on the West Shore railroad, and his wife, are mystified over his sudden disappearance from his home and employment. Monday morning he left this city on the way freight for Ravena at 8:45 o'clock, and the train and crew arrived there between 4 and 5 o'clock it being the end of the run. A short time later according to the story of some of the crew Mr. Lowther spoke of going after blackberries and nothing more was thought of his going away until Tuesday morning when he failed to show up for his run south at 7:15. Inquiry failed to locate him and fearing that he might perhaps fallen into some hole, been waylaid, or met with some mishap the State Troopers were notified and a search instituted, railroad men in Ravena taking part. Box cars were searched thinking that perhape he might have been taken ill and had gone into one, but no trace had been found of him up to noon today, according to employes at the West Shore station here and at the yard office. This morning bloodhounds were sent out in an effort to find if possible a trail of the missing man and another search of box cars made. It was learned, however, that Conductor Lowther had gone Monday afternoon to a barber shop at Ravena and got a shave and a haircut.

When he went away he wore his overalls, and had left his gold watch, his wallet containing money, and his laundry and other articles behind in the caboose where the members of the train crew slept and eat when away from Kingston. These articles were sent to this city, Tuesday night and this morning and were turned over to his wfe.

Mrs. Lowther is ill with grief over the mysterious disappearance of her husband, who received his pay Saturday the greater part of which it is said he left at home, so if he was held up and robbed as may be possible by someone who thought he had his two weeks' pay, they could not have gotten much.

Conductor Lowther has been on the West Shore a long period of years, aged about 50 years, with many friends, and was in good health.

FREEMAN FINDS SCHIMECK FAMILY AND GETS TRUTH OF AMAZING "JACK BROWN" MYSTERY

"JACK BROWN" FOUND, INSISTS "HE'S" A MAN

Female Lover of Mary Holdowanetz Located Working With Men at Monticello Boarding House Baffles Inquirers.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Monticello, N. Y., Aug. 10.—Who "done wrong" to pretty, blue-eyed, trusting Mary Holdowanetz?

"Not I," said Jack Brown, a farm hand, here today.

Mary caused a country-wide sensation yesterday, when she sprang a regular "Mademoiselle de Maupin" story of how a girl named Carolyn Schimeck had deceived her into believing her a man—her man, at that and made love to her for two years with promises of marriage.

"Jack Brown" was the pseudonym of the young lover. Mary says, and she found out to her sorrow that "Jack" had been spoofing her.

But when reporters found "Jack Brown" working as a farm hand on the Kutcher farm here today, he insisted he was plain Jack Brown, without any quotation marks, and that he had made love to Mary as any gentleman might, but that "nothing came of it."

Jack is working among men on the farm and living in a room with four other hands, and to all appearances is what he says he is. He hasn't much beard, but during his courtship of Mary, the latter says, he told her he used a preparation to take off the hair so that he needn't shave.

"I'm from Tillery, North Carolina," said Jack today. "I came north three years ago. I admit I asked Mary to marry me but nothing came of it. I don't know why she should want to sue me.

"My name is just Brown, and I never heard the name of Carolyn Schimeck before."

New York, Aug. 10.—"Jack Brown" may insist he is just plain Jack Brown, but Mary Noldowanetz, who believes she has been badly fooled in the great love affair of her life is not going to be stung a second time.

"It's a girl," says Mary.

Mary has ardent love letters from Jack, and later letters from a Carolyn Schimeck, of Kingston, N. Y., referring to a mutal love affair, and to her "brother Jack" who has gone away. She also has a letter from Carolyn's brother, Edwin asking her to send back the ring Carolyn gave her.

This ring, she says, was given her by "Jack" as an engagement ring.

Mary says that she doesn't care what the "Jack Brown" at Monticello may say about his sex or the affair, she knows now, for she "was convinced."

"When I found out it was Carolyn, not Jack" said Mary, "she cried and said she couldn't bear to tell me the truth. She got the idea of playing boy when she was conductorette on the Delancy Street cars."

Mary doesn't care what becomes of "Jack" now, but she seeks redress because she wasted her time, and might have married some one else.

He wasn't her man, but it was wrong, anyhow.

Clarced With Corn Razor.

He said his own razor had been taken from him and used to do the cutting. As the wound was trivial, Medina did not need much attention and left soon afterward. It was reported down town this morning that the carving was done by a woman.

"JACK BROWN" MYSTERY

Their Daughter Caroline, Strong and With Preference For Male Attire, Now Waitress at Monticello, Is "Man" Who Wooed and Won New York Girl and Was Found Out When Girl Came to Sawkill Home—Family Lives Just Across Viaduct.

Filled with an idea since childhood that she should have been a boy instead of a girl, Caroline Schimeck, twenty-three years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Schimeck of the town of Ulster, for three years has posed as a man with the exception of four months of this year when she lived with her parents at Sawkill, during which time she dressed in girl's clothes but finally become tired of them, again donned man's attire and before daybreak one morning early in May disappeared.

Her family received a letter from her on Tuesday stating that she was employed at the boarding house of Kutcher Brothers at Monticello but that she had been ill and was unable to send any money to the family. Almost at the same time Mary Holdowanetz, employed as a waitress at the Oakland Lunch at 2,139 Lexington avenue, New York city, was applying in the Harlem Court in New York city for a warrant for the arrest of Caroline, who she said had kept company with her for two years under the name of "Jack Brown" and had proposed marriage to her. At about the same time Caroline's father, unable to support his family of a wife and seven children on the meagre wages which he had been receiving in operating a sewing machine for one of the skirt manufacturers in Rondout, was starting from Kingston for New York city in search of work. The Freeman Tuesday evening carried telegraph news of Mary's application for a warrant for the arrest of "Jack Brown."

The story as related to a Freeman reporter this morning by Mrs. Schimeck is one of the most remarkable that has developed in many years.

The Schimeck family came to the United States from Stanislau, Galicia, thirteen years ago. They went to North Carolina, where two older brothers of Mrs. Schimeck had already settled and engaged in farming. The older brother still is there and is prosperous. The second older brother was unable to make much more than his ordinary expenses and about a month ago, according to Mrs. Schimeck, he became insane as the result of a fever he had sometime before, and was committed to a North Carolina institution.

The Schimeck family left North Carolina about seven years ago because they were unable to make a living wage. Mrs. Schimeck worked for the younger of her two brothers for thirty cents a day. Her husband also worked hard but did not receive enough money for living expenses in view of the growing size of the family. He went to Brooklyn and secured employment.

Three years ago Caroline, or Lena, as her family call her, decided definitely to don man's clothing and go to work. She was tall and broad shouldered, but she had a decidedly soft and feminine face. She made the acquaintance of a man named Willie O'Brien, said Mrs. Schimeck, and he induced her to cut her hair short. After that she secured employment with the Brooklyn Rapid Transit railroad system and worked as a laborer. Because of the talk among neighbors when she appeared sometimes in man's clothing and sometimes wearing dresses, the family moved from place to place. Most of the time Lena lived apart from them but finally she announced she was going to marry O'Brien. When O'Brien came to the house, the family decided he was too old to marry Lena. He appeared to be about forty years old and Lena was only twenty years old. Schimeck protested to Lena but she continued to talk about marrying him until a woman who claimed to be O'Brien's wife appeared at their home one day with two children of whom she said O'Brien was the father. After that Lena stopped going with O'Brien but she maintained her man's clothing. She also changed her job.

For two summers, dressed as a man, Lena was employed at the Kutcher boarding house from early spring until late in the fall. The Kutchers believed and apparently still believe that she is a man. When she first opened work there they explained to her that she was such a young "boy." They could not pay her much, and offered her $30 a month and her board. But the "boy" quickly displayed such ability to work that she was set at work on the farm, digging ditches and performing other manual labor which the men employed on the place could not do without help. Lena, however, performed all tasks without assistance. During the summer she acted as a waiter and tips from summer boarders added considerably to the meagre wages paid by the boarding house proprietors.

In the hope of getting Lena to give up her desire to work and dress like a man, the family about a year ago began looking for some small farm where they could also live to better advantage than in the crowded city. They saw an Ulster county farm advertised and came to Kingston. The real estate agent told them there was plenty of work to be obtained and life on the farm would be easy and he showed them a place at Sawkill. They moved to Sawkill but work was not easy to find.

In January Lena arrived at Sawkill. She was dressed as a man and said she was willing to work. It always had been her wish, she said, to own and work on a farm, and she thought she could get her uncle at Tillery, North Carolina, to help her. He, however, did not have funds and the other uncle said he could not advance money for the farm unless the family also had money to put in it. Lena sought work in Sawkill. The Rev. Father Vaeth, pastor of St. Ann's Church, where the family attended irregularly, learned that Lena was a girl and promptly made an investigation. He made inquiries of Lena, who displayed letters signed by an official whose name he does not recall, granting permission to Lena to wear man's clothing on account of war work which she was doing. The letter was written during the war. He told her the war was over and she must not go about Sawkill dressed as a man. To a Freeman reporter this morning Father Vaeth said he had given Lena odd jobs around the rectory and she had proved herself a hard worker and displayed talent for good housekeeping. She worked there altogether about ten days.

Lena was persuaded by Father Vaeth and her family to discard man's clothing and attire herself in dresses. She talked constantly of wanting to be a man, but her parents told her that was impossible and that she could, if she wished, work just as hard as a man without being dressed like one. Father Vaeth did not learn of Lena's adventures in New York or the search which was made for her in this vicinity by the New York waitress until late in the spring, after Lena had again disappeared.

In March, an automobile appeared at Sawkill one day containing a well dressed young woman accompanied by a trained nurse and began making inquiries for "Jack Brown." No such person was known there, but the young woman continued her search, going from house to house and finally came to the Schimeck house where she discovered the object of her search, dressed as a woman.

The visiting stranger, who proved to be Mary Holdowanetz, asked for an explanation and "Jack" explained that she was a woman. Mrs. Schimeck does not recall all that took place, except that the family learned that while Lena had been masquerading as a man she had met Mary, the waitress, and had proposed marriage. Mary said she had searched for "Jack," making Saugerties her headquarters, and had spent nearly all of her savings of $400 in the search—money she had intended to use in furnishing their home when she married "Jack."

Both Mary and Lena were much attached to each other, said Mrs. Schimeck. Mary insisted that she had the marriage license with her and even though Lena was a girl and not the "Jack" of her dreams, she insisted she wanted to marry "him." Lena joined with her parents in explaining that marriage was impossible, and said she had left Mary when the latter began to insist on marriage. She told Mary that she wanted to save money to buy a farm, that she could earn more money as a man and could work harder if dressed in man's clothing, but marriage was out of the question. Besides, Lena explained, if she continued to keep company with Mary she would continue to spend all her earnings on her and would not be able to save anything.

Mary remained over night at the house and the following day returned to New York.

Late in March the Schimeck family removed from Sawkill to the old Johnson property, the second house on the right on the Kingston-West Hurley road after passing over the Kingston bridge. During the winter months Lena had spent her time in knitting and crocheting and her mother, in the hope of getting the idea of wearing man's clothes out of her head, had helped her. One day Lena dressed up in a Gypsy costume which she had brought with her from New York and posed in the sunlight outside the house for a picture. Afterward her father asked her if she was not better satisfied to be a girl than a boy, and said he did not believe she was strong enough to do man's work. To prove her strength, Lena gave him a tap on the chest which sent him spinning.

On the night of the first of April Mr and Mrs Schimeck were awakened from their sleep by hearing some one walking in their room. Mr Schimeck turned on his flashlight and discovered Lena in the room. She complained of feeling ill but said she did not want anything. Mr. Schimeck at that time was doing farm work which required him to get up at four o'clock in the morning and he left the house at that hour. When Mrs. Schimeck and the children later awoke they discovered that Lena

MRS. HOUSE WREN.

"I don't care," said Mrs. House Wren, "to go out into the world and seek my fortune. I like to stay at home, and yet I am very sociable."

"Goodness me," said Mrs. House Wren's neighbor, known as Mrs. Winter Wren.

"That's so," said Mrs. House Wren, "that's so. I haven't any desire to be a great singer or a big powerful bird. I'm quite satisfied with my own surroundings."

"Well," said Mrs. Winter Wren, "I agree with you, though I must go farther North now, for I am not around here in the summer time very much, you know. We go up North further, as we like to be here in the winter time when there are few birds about, and so we can cheer the people up.

"You must tell me what you think about bird life in general and other interesting bits of news, for I haven't much time and yet I want to talk to you. I must be on my way. I am very late now in getting off.

"Usually they say that they only see me around these parts in the winter time, but this year I am later than usual and here I am.

"But as I just said I must be off soon, so do let's have a little talk before I hurry on my way.

"I am smaller than you are, and I have black markings on my tail and on my wings, whereas you are almost all brown. Of course, we're both rather grayish in the front. Those are the kinds of front pieces we like to have.

"I've got a shorter tail than you have, and it is rather square in shape, and I always like to hold my tail up in the air as though I were proud of it.

"Some creatures let their tails hang down as though they were ashamed of them.

"Of course they may not be ashamed of them, but that is always the way it looks to me.

"So I stick my tail up straight behind me, just as proud as proud can be.

"We love to hide behind wood piles when the wood is nice like brushwood. That's the kind we like. And we play hide-and-go-seek and have such a good time. We build our nests in such places, too, using any old stump with a hollow in it, or even an old brush heap or an old worn-out tin.

"We're not fussy that way. But we always have our nests softly lined with grass and feathers.

"But you were going to tell me of yourself," said Mrs. Winter Wren. "If once I get on the subject of the white eggs with the little red spots, I'll never stop talking!" And Mrs. Wren whisked her little tail and gave it a jerk as much as to say:

"I'm Satisfied."

"That's the truth, that's the truth."

"Of course," said Mrs. House Wren, "when I said I didn't care to go out into the world to make my fortune, I didn't mean that I always stayed in the same place, for I cannot stand the cold as you can, and we are here in the summer and we go along the Gulf coast during the winter time.

"But I meant that I didn't care about trying to be something I wasn't intended to be. I am satisfied that I'm a little House Wren and pleased with the work that House Wrens have always had to do.

"Our work is really most pleasant work. We eat insects all the time.

"That is why they say we're of great help to people, and we're mighty glad to help them, for they are good to us. They fix up bird houses for us where we can build our nests, and we like to tell them we are grateful by eating the insects which would hurt their trees.

"Yes, the House Wrens are quite satisfied with the work they have to do, and they never want to change their ways. They always want to be friendly with people and they are never afraid of people.

"But I will not keep you any longer, Mrs. Winter Wren. I'm glad to have had this little chat with you for it is a pleasure I seldom have."

"Thank you," said Mrs. Winter Wren as she flew off.

Why is "A" like 12 o'clock noon?—Because it is in the middle of day.

If a tough piece of beefsteak could talk, what great English poet do you suppose it would mention?—Chaw-sir (Chaucer).

Meaning of "Idaho."

The name "Idaho" was derived from a Shoshone Indian word which means "The gem of the mountains," and refers undoubtedly to the brightness of the shining sun on the mountain tops of the state.

SOMETHING FOR COMPANY.

A dish which few people will not enjoy is prepared with the coarse outer stalks of celery. Cut them into half-inch lengths and cook until tender. Arrange a layer of the cooked celery in a baking dish, sprinkle with fine grated cheese, then add a covering of thick white sauce. Repeat with another layer of celery, cheese and white sauce and top with buttered crumbs. Bake until well heated and the crumbs are brown.

Larded Beef Tenderloin.—Cut fat pork for larding from the fat portion nearest the rind. Remove the rind and cut the lardons one-fourth inch wide and as long as the pork slices permit. Chill the lardons in iced water before threading and insert them one-fourth inch below the surface and draw through, tying in a loose knot. Arrange in rows or triangles and dredge the tenderloins with flour, season well and brown in a hot frying pan turning often to keep from scorching; then cook slowly until done, basting with the fat from the pan. Surround with baked bananas and serve with:

Poivraide Sauce.—Put two tablespoonfuls of the trimmings of salt pork in a saucepan and fry out. Add two slices of onion, five of carrot, two sprigs of parsley, a quarter of a bay leaf, a slice of green pepper and half a chili pepper; cook until all are softened, drain off the fat, add one-fourth cupful of vinegar and let simmer on the back part of the stove until the vinegar is reduced to half. To the fat add enough butter to make four tablespoonfuls, add the same amount of flour and cook until smooth, then add a cupful and one-half of brown stock, the vegetables and the vinegar, boil once, strain over one-half cupful of sultana raisins cooked in boiling water until tender, add three tablespoonfuls of currant jelly and the same of orange juice.

Cabbage Salad With Cream.—Shred a tender young head of cabbage very fine, sprinkle with salt and sugar, pour over a rich heavy cream and add a dash of vinegar.

Stories of Great Scouts

By Elmo Scott Watson

"JOHNNY APPLESEED," SCOUT WHO PLANTED ORCHARDS

Not all of the great scouts were Indian fighters. In contrast to the career of Lewis Wetzel, who was something of a professional Indian killer, is the life of John Chapman or "Johnny Appleseed." Chapman never killed an Indian in his life, but he probably saved as many white men from death at their hands as Wetzel did.

Chapman first appeared on the Ohio frontier in 1806. He came floating down the Ohio river in a canoe, towing another, and both boats were loaded with apple seeds from the cider mills of Pennsylvania. His purpose was to plant the seeds in the wilderness so that orchards would be started for the settlers when they arrived there to make their homes.

For the next 30 years he went everywhere up and down the Ohio country, planting seeds, going from one orchard to another, pruning and caring for the young trees. He was a welcome visitor in the log cabins of the settlers for he always carried a Bible and some books from which he would read and preach to them before the blazing fireplaces in the evening.

Johnny practiced his teachings of humility and kindness. He never killed anything for food. He carried a kit of cooking utensils, including a mush pan, which he sometimes wore as a hat. Usually he wore a broad-brimmed black hat, but a coffee sack with arm holes cut in it was his only coat.

White men called him "queer," for he often went barefoot in winter as well as in summer, but the Indians said, "He has been touched by the Great Spirit." He went everywhere among them unharmed, for the fact that Johnny never carried a gun convinced them that he was under the special protection of the Manito.

During the War of 1812 when the British were overrunning the Ohio country, Johnny Appleseed performed his greatest service for his people. In his wanderings among the tribes he often learned of their plans for attacks on the settlements. Where no other white man could have gone, Johnny passed in safety and more than once he carried warnings to the settlers, giving them time to prepare for defense before the red invaders swept down upon them.

All this time Johnny Appleseed was carrying out his cherished dream of making Ohio bloom with fruit trees and many of the finest orchards in that state today owe their beginnings to this strange man. In his later years Johnny left the country which he had helped beautify and went to live with a relative in Fort Wayne, Ind. He died in 1847.

Embarrassing, Indeed!

Economizing might be all right, but first know your location! I went into a two-priced millinery store and after trying on several hats and not caring particularly for any, realized that it was next to impossible to get away without a purchase. Finally I said I had no money, but selected a hat for them to put away for me, and promised I would surely return for it the next evening. I breathed relief when I made my exit, and passing a store a few doors away, entered upon seeing a hat much to my taste, and after trying it on decided I really would buy it. As I was about to take the money from my purse, to my surprise the manager of the first store (he owned both, I later learned), entered, and seeing me, cynically smiled and said: "Don't waste your time on this customer—she's only sightseeing and has no intention of buying." My embarrassment, together with anger, was the limit, and I arose in a rage and left the store.—Chicago American.

MRS. HOUSE WREN.

"I don't care," said Mrs. House Wren, "to go out into the world and seek my fortune. I like to stay at home, and yet I am very sociable."

"Goodness me," said Mrs. House Wren's neighbor, known as Mrs Winter Wren.

"That's so," said Mrs. House Wren, "that's so. I haven't any desire to be a great singer or a big powerful bird I'm quite satisfied with my own surroundings."

"Well," said Mrs. Winter Wren, "I agree with you, though I must go farther North now, for I am not around here in the summer time very much, you know. We go up North further, as we like to be here in the winter time when there are few birds about, and so we can cheer the people up.

"You must tell me what you think about bird life in general and other interesting bits of news, for I haven't much time and yet I want to talk to you. I must be on my way. I am very late now in getting off.

"Usually they say that they only see me around these parts in the winter time, but this year I am later than usual and here I am.

"But as I just said I must be off soon, so do let's have a little talk before I hurry on my way.

"I am smaller than you are, and I have black markings on my tail and on my wings, whereas you are almost all brown. Of course, we're both rather grayish in the front. Those are the kinds of front pieces we like to have.

"I've got a shorter tail than you have, and it is rather square in shape, and I always like to hold my tail up in the air as though I were proud of it.

"Some creatures let their tails hang down as though they were ashamed of them.

"Of course they may not be ashamed of them, but that is always the way it looks to me.

"So I stick my tail up straight behind me, just as proud as proud can be.

"We love to hide behind wood piles when the wood is nice like brushwood. That's the kind we like. And we play hide-and go-seek and have such a good time. We build our nests in such places, too, using any old stump with a hollow in it, or even an old brush heap or an old worn-out tin.

"We're not fussy that way. But we always have our nests softly lined with grass and feathers.

"But you were going to tell me of yourself," said Mrs Winter Wren. "If once I get on the subject of the white

"I'm Satisfied."

eggs with the little red spots, I'll never stop talking!" And Mrs. Wren whisked her little tail and gave it a jerk as much as to say:

"That's the truth, that's the truth."

"Of course," said Mrs. House Wren, "when I said I didn't care to go out into the world to make my fortune, I didn't mean that I always stayed in the same place, for I cannot stand the cold as you can, and we are here in the summer and we go along the Gulf coast during the winter time.

"But I meant that I didn't care about trying to be something I wasn't intended to be. I am satisfied that I'm a little House Wren and pleased with the work that House Wrens have always had to do.

"Our work is really most pleasant work. We eat insects all the time.

"That is why they say we're of great help to people, and we're mighty glad to help them, for they are good to us. They fix up bird houses for us where we can build our nests, and we like to tell them we are grateful by eating the insects which would hurt their trees.

"Yes, the House Wrens are quite satisfied with the work they have to do, and they never want to change their ways. They always want to be friendly with people and they are never afraid of people.

"But I will not keep you longer, Mrs. Winter Wren. I'm glad to have had this little chat with you for it is a pleasure I seldom have."

"Thank you," said Mrs. Winter Wren as she flew off.

Chill the lardons in iced water before threading and insert them one-fourth inch below the surface and draw through, tying in a loose knot. Arrange in rows or triangles and dredge the tenderloins with flour, season well and brown in a hot frying pan turning often to keep from scorching; then cook slowly until done, basting with the fat from the pan. Surround with baked bananas and serve with:

Poivraide Sauce.—Put two tablespoonfuls of the trimmings of salt pork in a saucepan and fry out. Add two slices of onion, five of carrot, two sprigs of parsley, a quarter of a bay leaf, a slice of green pepper and half a chili pepper; cook until all are softened, drain off the fat, add one-fourth cupful of vinegar and let simmer on the back part of the stove until the vinegar is reduced to half. To the fat add enough butter to make four tablespoonfuls, add the same amount of flour and cook until smooth, then add a cupful and one-half of brown stock, the vegetables and the vinegar, boil once, strain over one-half cupful of sultana raisins cooked in boiling water until tender, add three tablespoonfuls of currant jelly and the same of orange juice.

Cabbage Salad With Cream.—Shred a tender young head of cabbage very fine, sprinkle with salt and sugar, pour over a rich heavy cream and add a dash of vinegar.

"JOHNNY APPLESEED," SCOUT WHO PLANTED ORCHARDS

Not all of the great scouts were Indian fighters. In contrast to the career of Lewis Wetzel, who was something of a professional Indian killer, is the life of John Chapman or "Johnny Appleseed." Chapman never killed an Indian in his life, but he probably saved as many white men from death at their hands as Wetzel did.

Chapman first appeared on the Ohio frontier in 1806. He came floating down the Ohio river in a canoe, towing another, and both boats were loaded with apple seeds from the cider mills of Pennsylvania. His purpose was to plant the seeds in the wilderness so that orchards would be started for the settlers when they arrived there to make their homes.

For the next 30 years he went everywhere up and down the Ohio country, planting seeds, going from one orchard to another, pruning and caring for the young trees. He was a welcome visitor in the log cabins of the settlers for he always carried a Bible and some books from which he would read and preach to them before the blazing fireplaces in the evening.

Johnny practiced his teachings of humility and kindness. He never killed anything for food. He carried a kit of cooking utensils, including a mush pan, which he sometimes wore as a hat. Usually he wore a broad-brimmed black hat, but a coffee sack with arm holes cut in it was his only coat.

White men called him "queer," for he often went barefoot in winter as well as in summer, but the Indians said, "He has been touched by the Great Spirit." He went everywhere among them unharmed, for the fact that Johnny never carried a gun convinced them that he was under the special protection of the Manito.

During the War of 1812 when the British were overrunning the Ohio country, Johnny Appleseed performed his greatest service for his people. In his wanderings among the tribes he often learned of their plans for attacks on the settlements. Where no other white man could have gone, Johnny passed in safety and more than once he carried warnings to the settlers, giving them time to prepare for defense before the red invaders swept down upon them.

All this time Johnny Appleseed was carrying out his cherished dream of making Ohio bloom with fruit trees and many of the finest orchards in that state today owe their beginnings to this strange man. In his later years Johnny left the country which he had helped beautify and went to live with a relative in Fort Wayne, Ind. He died in 1847.

Embarrassing, Indeed!

Economizing might be all right, but first know your location: I went into a two-priced millinery store and after trying on several hats and not caring particularly for any, realized that it was next to impossible to get away without a purchase. Finally I said I had no money, but selected a hat for them to put away for me, and promised I would surely return for it the next evening. I breathed relief when I made my exit, and pressing a store a few doors away, entered upon seeing a hat much to my taste, and after trying it on decided I really would buy it. As I was about to take the money from my purse, to my surprise the manager of the first store (the second both, I later learned), espied, and waving me, excitedly smiled and said: "Don't waste your time on this customer—she's only sightseeing and has no intention of buying." My embarrassment, together with anger, was the limit, and I arose in a rage and left the store.—Chicago American.

KINGSTON, N. Y., AUG. 10, 1921

August and September will be the months of fairs and there is nothing that offers a better day's sport than attending one of these exhibitions. No matter where you live, or what you do for a living, a fair has a value to anyone who will attend. There is something new to learn every year, and aside from the pleasure it offers it has an educational value. "I saw it at the fair," is an expression very frequently used.

When you think the heel of every man, woman and child in the world is on your neck, don't say a word. Just smile and bear it. Your reason is not the best when you feel that you are all shot to pieces, and whatever you do will undoubtedly be the thing you shouldn't do. The way to do is wait, take your time, because it cannot last forever and the sun will come out again. Then things will be brighter and your philosophy will enlarge. But there isn't a thing to be gained by trying to force things that will not move. This only uses up energy that could be devoted to better advantage later.

LOOSE TALK.

An interesting example of the too prevalent habit of basing argument on unwarranted assumption is presented in the remark of Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon League, that "if England would only stop its enormous drink waste of nearly $2,000,000,000 a year, it would not be so very difficult for her to meet her interest payments on her foreign debts." This assumes that if the English people did not spend that great sum on drink every year, they would make a free gift of the same amount to the British government, or in some mysterious way that government would get possession of it, when, as a matter of fact, a prodigious part of it would go to pay the excessive prices charged by bootleggers for adulterated liquors, a part of it would go for drugs or other questionable indulgencies, and some part of it might go into the savings banks, but, instead of receiving any direct share, the British government would be obliged to impose new taxes in substitution for the great liquor revenues it had lost.

Such have been the results in this country, as we all know, notwithstanding the loose talk and unwarranted promises of the sort quoted above. Granting, for argument's sake, that under prohibition there are gains in a moral sense, and that the families of hard drinkers may have more money to spend for necessaries, it remains obvious to the most ordinary intellect that there is no economic gain so far as the government is concerned. On the contrary, the government faces a great loss of revenue and is forced to levy new taxes in consequence.

AN UNCOMMON THEFT.

If a list were made of objects that can not be stolen on account of their size, weight or prominence in the landscape, undoubtedly houses would be included. How could a thief carry off a house undetected, whoever heard of so bold a bit of robbery, and where is the evildoer who has ever dreamed of such brazen depravity? Negative answers would promptly follow these questions in any community. Yet an Atlanta negro stole a two-story house, a brick house at that, and "got away with it" in broad daylight. Before the crime was committed the house was located at 591 Whitehall street, a prominent thoroughfare of Georgia's capital. Of course, the negro could not carry the house off on his back—or on his head in African fashion—but it was possible for him to tear it down and cart it away, which he did. He denied the charge, but the testimony convicted him, and the judge gave him twelve months of hard labor.

In the reports of the trial of Ben Chapman for his ingenious theft we read: "Testimony introduced showed that Chapman had employed a gang of laborers and proceeded to tear down the building. As the materials were taken away, they were loaded in wagons, and, according to the State's witnesses, sold in all parts of the city. One witness testified that a very good building had already been built from material taken from the stolen building. Chapman was not molested during the two months it required for him to steal the house, said witnesses. Those who watched the work thought it was simply a gang from some house-wrecking concern and did not suspect the workmen of being thieves." The whereabouts of the owner or his agent is not stated.

Burroughs Nature Club Notes

What do you want to know about Nature Subjects? Send any questions of general interest to the Nature Notes Department of this paper. Look for answers in this column.

Can You Answer These Questions?

1. Do rattle-snakes lay eggs?
2. What is the best food for gold fish?
3. Is the female flicker marked like the male?

Answers in Tomorrow's Nature Notes.

Answers to Previous Questions.

1. What class of refuse turned into our streams is most destructive to vegetation, and what is its particular action on such vegetation?

As there is so much refuse and of so many varieties, from different manufactures, etc., that can be turned destructively into streams, we can hardly elect the worst. Anything with strong chemical properties would injure vegetation and also the fishes. Using streams for dumping grounds is a deplorable practice.

2. How can I start a rose hedge from one bush?

A slow process. Take shoots, cutting cleanly and diagonally. Root in sharp sand and water, in strong light. Set out when rooted in good soil. Bone meal stirred near, but not on the roots, is stimulating. Better plant your small cuttings near the old bush, making an expanding clump, rather than a straggly row.

3. What is the chief diet of sea gulls living around Great Salt Lake? Do they eat the worm-like scales on the shores of the lake?

The Franklin gull is common in Utah, and a great eater of insects, long-horned grasshoppers, etc. Readers outside Utah may not know that early settlers in Utah were almost ruined by a cricket pest that ate the crops as fast as planted. Sea gulls appeared in great flocks, however, and consumed the insects. A beautiful monument commemorates this. We don's know what "the worm-like scale" refers to, but probably the birds do eat it.

OUR DAILY PATTERN.

A Neat And Becoming Dress For Work Or Porch Wear.

Pattern 3344 was employed to make this style. It is cut in 7 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, and 46 inches bust measure. A 38 inch size requires 6 yards of 36 inch material.

Checked gingham in blue and white with trimming of white linen and fancy braid is here shown. Linen, percale, lawn, poplin, seersucker and sateen are good for this design. The skirt with plaits extended measures about 1¾ yards.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in coin or 1c and 2c stamps by the Pattern Department, the Freeman, Rondout, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

Catalogue Notice.

Send 15c in coin or stamps for our up-to-date spring and summer 1921 catalogue, containing 550 designs of Ladies', Misses' and Children's Patterns, a concise and comprehensive article on dressmaking, also some points for the needle (illustrating 30 of the various, simple stitches), all valuable hints to the home dressmaker.

Corean and Chinese Languages.

The Corean language belongs to the same class of language as the Mongol-Tatar, Japanese and Chinese. It has borrowed many words from the Chinese, since Chinese was the diplomatic language of the country for many centuries. In sounds it differs widely from modern Chinese, and in grammar is nearly identical with Japanese.

ON-A-JOB, OFF-A-JOB JIM!

Being a Story Of how Jim got on a job and why he got off it again.

"You can get work around here, if you try the Lowell Farm," stated old Joe, as Jim bade him goodbye. "Noticed t'other day how the fruit trees they set out a couple of years ago needed pruning. You could get the job if you wanted it bad."

"I want it all right, but I don't know a thing about pruning."

"You'll know sufficient if you listen to me for three minutes. Pruning's a stunt that you ketch onto mighty quick, if you know a few of the principles. Open up the head of a tree, so the sunlight can get into the center. Cut back long sprawling branches, and nip off the suckers that grow out of the trunk and limbs. Then use yer brains!"

"Couldn't I hurt the tree?"

"Don't worry about that. Just remember that when you saw off a branch, paint over the stub to keep the sap from running out and the bugs from making a nest in the wound."

"It seems sort of cheeky to—"

"Cheek is what folks need nowadays. Push yerself ahead, make places fer yourself, and if you can deliver the goods, as I'm thinkin' yer can, yer conscience don't need to trouble yer."

Taking Joe's advice, Jim hastened toward the farm, glad of the prospect of work near at hand. He knocked several times at the rear door before it was opened by a plump, rosy-faced woman in overalls.

"Is the manager of the farm around?" asked Jim.

"I'm it; manager, owner and chief boss," was the hearty reply. "What can I do for you?"

"I want to work on your trees. They need pruning. I need work. Couldn't we both be given a chance?"

"Know anything about pruning?"

"Not much. Perhaps enough to do a passable job. Besides—I won't charge much."

"There are tools in the shed. Help yourself." The woman nodded toward the tool shed. Jim obeyed orders, such as they were. He found a pair of overalls, pruning shears, saw, a can of paint.

After a little practice Jim quickly saw where to cut. It was interesting work, and as he proceeded from tree to tree he forgot about his trying to land a new job every other day, and lived wholly in the present. Suddenly he was aroused by the cheery voice of his employer.

"Don't you ever eat, Mr. Pruner?"

"I sure do, Mistress Farmer," and Jim realized for the first time the cavity within.

"How are your ears, then?"

"Ears? The last time I examined them they were O. K. Why?"

"The dinner bell's been ringing till even the cows protest. Don't you know what a diner bell means?"

"I say, you are good, coming all this way for me. I won't keep you waiting another moment."

"You haven't told me your name," the woman stated, as they crossed the field together.

"I beg your pardon. I'm Jim Lawrence."

"Jim? Very good, Jim. I'm Molly. Just Molly to my friends, and to you, I guess, Jim," she added, as she passed through the door he held open for her. "You'd better plan to remain here the rest of the summer."

Burch, who had been in Los Angeles, was arrested in Nevada while on his way to his home. He was taken back to Los Angeles. Ralph B. Obenchain, prominent Chicago lawyer, says he is ready to forgive his former wife and will stand by her. Mr. Obenchain is alleged to have told the police that it was his wife's love for Kennedy that broke up their home.

Thackeray.

Sara Orne Jewett says of Thackeray: "Thackeray is so great, a great Christian. He does not affect, he humbly learns and reverently tries to teach out of his own experiences."

Daily Thought.

But silence never shows itself to so great an advantage as when it is made the reply to calumny and defamation, provided that we give no just occasion for them.—Addison.

THINK IN WORDS

Mental Composition Habitual With Most Great Writers.

As a Result Their Thoughts Are Easily Marshaled When They Sit at Their Desks.

At least one great writer, Wordsworth, composed in his head, without pencil or paper.

We are given a whimsical picture of his sister, Dorothy, trailing the gaunt old man over the Cumbrian hills, notebook in hand, jotting down as best she could his inspired dictation.

Of course, few would care to emulate his method. Formal composition, for most scribes, is better done on paper where the elusive phrase is permanently recorded, the fugitive word captured, the form and cadence of the thing made obvious to the eye.

Yet, in another sense mental composition has been habitual with all great writers who have been generous enough to disclose their habits of thought.

They instinctively think in words. Under the elm tree, along the trout stream, even in the thoroughfares and work shops of life, they are coining phrases, silently casting what they think and set into appropriate language, fitting and discarding adjective and verb in the eternal search for perfect expression.

Freckled newsboys, sunsets, traffic jams, symphonies, even the abstract meditations of reverie, pass into their minds as phrases, to sink, apparently forgotten, into the storehouse of the unconscious mind.

When such men sit down to write they have no need to brush the cobwebs from a neglected vocabulary. The joints of expression are not stiff and squeaky from long disuse.

They have spun the glorious skein in wayward hours, and when loom-time comes there remains only the weaving of the pattern.

One November evening, many years ago, three men were crossing a heath on the outskirts of London. On a hill ahead of them stood a church with a tall spire. Suddenly the sun broke through a bank of clouds and illuminated its gold cross.

The autumnal silence around them, the reminiscent savor of the heath, the peculiar moodiness of the season and the hour, the ominous gloom of the sky, the red shaft of sunset lighting the distant cross—all conspired to arouse a peculiar sense of awe in the spectators.

Yet only one word was spoken—a reverent, spontaneous exclamation—"Calvary!"

And the man who said it was Thackeray.

He had merely revealed, half audibly, the impassioned search for inevitable words that ever goes on in the mind of the artist.

Perhaps it's a gift, or an obsession, this thinking eternally in words. Perhaps normal mental processes would be blocked and embarrassed by such a habit.

But it would at least seem lamentable that in conversation, a training ground in which all spend so many hours, there should be so little conscious effort to speak with grace and precision, so habitual a mouthing of stock phrases, banal flippances and current slang.

We should go to school to the Tennessee mountaineers where generic speech, through social isolation, has been able in its humble way to survive.—Milwaukee Journal.

Walter Scott's First Love.

The young woman in Walter Scott's first love affair was Miss Willamena Belches, the daughter of a baronet, and when she and Scott were nineteen years old they met for the first time by accident. Scott at that time was merely the apprentice to his father, who was a solicitor, and no very lordly one at that. After the young persons had been seen much in each other's company, Scott, senior, waited upon Sir John Belches and told him that the affair ought not to be allowed to proceed without his sanction. The young woman, it is presumed, satisfied her father that she had no thought whatever of accepting Walter, although they continued to correspond and to meet frequently. At one time there was an understanding between them that Scott seemed to accept as an engagement, but the young woman did not, and eventually she chose a husband whose prospects were more imposing.

Flying Torpedoes.

Experiments, throwing a new light on the problems of aerial war, are reported as having been taking place with great secrecy near Paris.

Small heavier-than-air machines, really torpedoes with wings, are sent up into the air under their own power, and entirely pilotless, and are then controlled by wireless telegraphy.

Machines are flown for considerable distances and made to carry out maneuvers while under wireless direction from the ground.

A further development contemplated is for a method to be perfected by means of which a pilot in an airplane can control the movements of one of these air torpedoes.

This would mean that after a torpedo had been launched and controlled up to a certain height by the land station, its direction would be taken over by a pilot in a special airplane, who would send it on ahead until he had guided it to its target, he himself remaining at some distance.

Prevent a Black Eye.

When a child has had a fall or received a blow which is likely to cause a black eye, the best remedy is to butter the parts for two or three inches around the eye every few minutes for an hour.

Lost "Victory" Recovered.

Dust-covered and forgotten, two big packing cases have been reposing in the yard of federal parliament house. They had been received twelve months ago from London, and had been "dumped" with other stores in an out-of-the-way place. Recently one of the cases was opened and was found to contain a female figure in bronze with a helmet on her head. This was intended to represent Victory and was designed to commemorate the heroism of Australian soldiers. The statue was a gift of the commonwealth by Bertram Mackennal, the Australian sculptor. The smaller case contained the base of the statue. The unfortunate oversight has been rectified and Australia's thanks have been sent to Mr. Mackennal.

Tracing History of Cabbage.

The Romans are credited with introducing cabbage into England, and the soldiers of Cromwell carried it to Scotland and made it popular there, as they did also in Ireland, according to tradition.

The Cleveland provides qualities that are not found in other cars selling for much more. It will meet your every requirement on any kind of roadway, on the boulevard, paved highway or country road, on the straight-way level road or the steepest hill.

The scientific distribution of weight and the long underslung spring construction give to the Cleveland riding comfort on rough roads not excelled by cars weighing twice as much.

Sturdily built, beautifully finished and splendidly upholstered bodies are mounted on the staunch Cleveland chassis.

KINGSTON, N. Y., AUG. 10, 1921.

August and September will be the months of fairs and there is nothing that offers a better day's sport than attending one of these exhibitions. No matter where you live, or what you do for a living, a fair has a value to anyone who will attend. There is something new to learn every year, and aside from the pleasure it offers it has an educational value. "I saw it at the fair," is an expression very frequently used.

When you think the heel of every man, woman and child in the world is on your neck, don't say a word. Just smile and bear it. Your reason is not the best when you feel that you are all shot to pieces, and whatever you do will undoubtedly be the thing you shouldn't do. The way to do is wait, take your time, because it cannot last forever and the sun will come out again. Then things will be brighter and your philosophy will enlarge. But there isn't a thing to be gained by trying to force things that will not move. This only uses up energy that could be devoted to better advantage later.

LOOSE TALK.

An interesting example of the too prevalent habit of basing argument on unwarranted assumption is presented in the remark of Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon League, that "If England would only stop its enormous drink waste of nearly $2,000,000,000 a year, it would not be so very difficult for her to meet her interest payments on her foreign debts." This assumes that if the English people did not spend that great sum on drink every year, they would make a free gift of the same amount to the British government, or in some mysterious way that government would get possession of it, when, as a matter of fact, a prodigious part of it would go to pay the excessive prices charged by bootleggers for adulterated liquors, a part of it would go for drugs or other questionable indulgencies, and some part of it might go into the savings banks, but, instead of receiving any direct share, the British government would be obliged to impose new taxes in substitution for the great liquor revenues it had lost.

Such have been the results in this country, as we all know, notwithstanding the loose talk and unwarranted promises of the sort quoted above. Granting, for argument's sake, that under prohibition there are gains in a moral sense, and that the families of hard drinkers may have more money to spend for necessaries, it remains obvious to the most ordinary intellect that there is no economic gain so far as the government is concerned. On the contrary, the government faces a great loss of revenue and is forced to levy new taxes in consequence.

AN UNCOMMON THEFT.

If a list were made of objects that can not be stolen on account of their size, weight or prominence in the landscape, undoubtedly houses would be included. How could a thief carry off a house undetected, whoever heard of so bold a bit of robbery, and where is the evildoer who has ever dreamed of such brazen depravity? Negative answers would promptly follow these questions in any community. Yet an Atlanta negro stole a two-story house, a brick house at that, and "got away with it" in broad daylight. Before the crime was committed the house was located at 591 Whitehall street, a prominent thoroughfare of Georgia's capital. Of course, the negro could not carry the house off on his back—or on his head in African fashion—but it was possible for him to tear it down and cart it away, which he did. He denied the charge, but the testimony convicted him, and the judge gave him twelve months of hard labor.

In the reports of the trial of Ben Chapman for his marvelous theft we read: "Testimony introduced showed that Chapman had employed a band of laborers and proceeded to tear down the building. As the materials were taken away, they were loaded in wagons, and, according to the State's witnesses, sold in all parts of the city. One witness testified that a very good building had already been built from material taken from the stolen building. Chapman was not molested during the two months it required for him to steal the house, said witnesses. Those who watched the work thought it was simply a gang from some house-wrecking concern and did not suspect the workmen of being thieves." The whereabouts of the owner or his agent is not stated.

What do you want to know about Nature Subjects? Send any questions of general interest to the Nature Notes Department of this paper. Look for answers in this column.

Can You Answer These Questions?

1. Do rattle-snakes lay eggs?
2. What is the best food for gold fish?
3. Is the female flicker marked like the male?

Answers in Tomorrow's Nature Notes.

Answers to Previous Questions.

1. What class of refuse turned into our streams is most destructive to vegetation, and what is its particular action on such vegetation?

As there is so much refuse and of so many varieties, from different manufactures, etc., that can be turned destructively into streams, we can hardly elect the worst. Anything with strong chemical properties would injure vegetation and also the fishes. Using streams for dumping grounds is a deplorable practice.

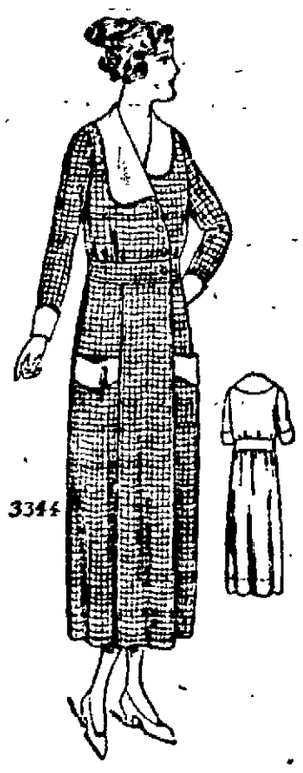
2. How can I start a rose hedge from one bush?

A slow process. Take shoots, cutting cleanly and diagonally. Root in sharp sand and water, in strong light. Set out when rooted in good soil. Bone meal stirred near, but not on the roots, is stimulating. Better plant your small cuttings near the old bush, making an expanding clump, rather than a straggly row.

3 What is the chief diet of sea gulls living around Great Salt Lake? Do they eat the worm-like scales on the shores of the lake?

The Franklin gull is common in Utah, and a great eater of insects, long-horned grasshoppers, etc. Readers outside Utah may not know that early settlers in Utah were almost ruined by a cricket pest that ate the crops as fast as planted. Sea gulls appeared in great flocks, however, and consumed the insects. A beautiful monument commemorates this. We don's know what "the worm-like scale" refers to, but probably the birds do eat it.

OUR DAILY PATTERN.



A Neat And Becoming Dress For Work Or Porch Wear.

Pattern 3344 was employed to make this style. It is cut in 7 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, and 46 inches bust measure. A 38 inch size requires 6 yards of 36 inch material.

Checked gingham in blue and white with trimming of white linen and fancy braid is here shown. Linen, percale, lawn, poplin, seersucker and sateen are good for this design. The skirt with plaits extended measures about 1¾ yards.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in coin or 1c and 2c stamps by the Pattern Department, the Freeman, Rondout, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

Corean and Chinese Language.

The Corean language belongs to the same stage of language as the Mongol-Tatar, Japanese and Chinese. It has borrowed many words from the Chinese, since Chinese was the diplomatic language of the country for many centuries. In sounds it differs widely from modern Chinese and in grammar is nearly identical with Japanese.

Ireland's Many Names.

Scots may be surprised, but in the days of Ptolemy Ireland was known as Scotia! In fact Ireland has had a number of names. Diodorus Siculus calls the Ireland Iris, or Irisi; in the De Mundo, credited by some scholars to Aristotle, it is called Irenne; in the Argonautica of Orpheus it appears as Irinus; Strabo called it Irene; Caesar, Tacitus and Pliny mentioned it as Hibernia; Mela called it Juverna. The native names in Celtic are Ir, Eri, Erin. Plutarch mentions it under the name of Ogygia.

As to Cerebral Structure.

So far as cerebral structure goes, it is clear that men differ less from the chimpanzee and orang, than these do even from the monkeys, and that the difference between the brain of the chimpanzee and of man is almost insignificant, when compared with that between the chimpanzee brain and that of a lemur.—J. W. Corey, M. D.

What "Smiles" Will Do For You.

Smiles will help the grocer with his lemon disposition. Lettuce hope he will turnip every day; it only requires 15 cents worth of kale a week and a little pep, to get this paper.

Smiles will make the shoe man feel a couple of feet ahead of his competitor, and the jeweler go forward and watch for charms.

Smiles will help the ice man to thaw out his chill, and the coal man to lighten his loads.

Smiles will make the clothier like to suit his customer, collar the boys and discuss the family ties.

Smiles will make the realtor think lots of his land.

Smiles will cause the lumber man to enjoy a frame-up, and "grin" at a put up job.

Smiles will cause you fall, if so, fall in line every day and read the Office Cat for we need you everyone.

Toddly and Shimmy stir New Jersey women, says a headline. It's a safe bet that they also agitate the Jersey men.

A practical joker is usually damphool who has sense enough not to play practical jokes on men who are bigger than he is.

Sing a song of mixed drinks,

Alas, the mighty nation
Now is high and dry.

As they drink their near beer,
All the birds do sing,
"Isn't this a dainty way
For us to take our fling?"

Circumstantial Testimony.

"You ought to have seen Mr. Marshall when he called to see Dolly the other night," remarked Johnny to his sister's young man, who was taking tea with the family. "I tell you, he looked fine a sittin' alongside of her with his arm—"

"Johnny!" gasped his sister, her face the color of a boiled lobster.

"Well, so he did," insisted Johnny. "He had his arm—"

"John," screamed the mother, frantically.

"Why," whined the boy. "I was—"

"John," said his father sternly, "leave the room."

And Johnny left, crying as he went: "I was only going to say that he had his army clothes on."

Peter Manning Breaks Record.

Thomas Murphy of Poughkeepsie, the well known track driver at the Cleveand grand circuit races, Tuesday drove Peter Manning, the five-year-old gelding, a mile in 2:00¼, going the half mile in 58¾ seconds. The record was made in an attempt to lower 2:02¼, the trotting record for five-year-old geldings established by Uhlan in Columbus in 1909. Murphy has also the distinction of driving the fastest two miles trotted this year.

IS RESTLESS AGE

Children Only Follow the Example of Their Parents.

Newspaper Asks the Pertinent Question Whether It is Not Time to Stop and Think.

"The poor little rich girl" is no fiction, as is demonstrated from time to time when surveys are taken of children to determine the causes of malnutrition and over-fatigue. The children of the wealthy or well-to-do more often than the children of the poor are found to be under weight or nervous. Sometimes the trouble is due to careless or improper feeding, though oftener to the complexity of modern life, says Dr. Borden S. Veeder of St. Louis, speaking before the section on the diseases of children at the meeting of the American Medical association, in session in Boston, the Oklahoman states.

"My little girl never has a leisure hour—in fact, she is just as busy as I am," said a mother to me one day.

"We just cannot keep our children at home in the evening," said another mother. "We have made a rule that they could not go out to parties or clubs except on Friday and Saturday nights, but we find we cannot enforce it."

It's the same old story—keeping up with Lizzie.

If your neighbor's child must be on the "go" continually, then, in order to keep the pace, your child must follow that silly example. At least that seems to be the popular supposition—keep up with Lizzie if you undermine your health, if you fail to secure a sound education, if you prepare for failure instead of success.

It is not surprising if the children and young people of today are eternally restless, if they never are content to remain at home, if they find life intolerable when their days and nights are not crowded with pleasure and amusements. Children always follow the example of their parents. When the mother belongs to three or four card clubs, a literary club or two, attends luncheons, teas and dinners, plays golf, sits on committees, dabbles a little in politics, what can you expect of the children? Growing up in an atmosphere where there is no quiet or repose, it is inevitable that children should be restless, continually seeking after new excitements, competing socially with those in their own circle, bent on being seen everywhere and having a good time at all costs. When a mother who is always going about remonstrates with her children for making so many engagements, that they have no time either for the necessary amount of rest or study, it is not surprising that her remarks carry no conviction.

When either children or adults spend their lives rushing from one place to another, from one pleasure to another, what have they, in the end, to show for their scattering of energy, their expenditure of time?

Women today are highly organized in culture clubs, patrons' clubs, and civic societies. Why do they not get together on this problem of conserving the time and energy of their children, saving a part of it from the eternal program of joy rides, dances, clubs and picture shows?

THE NEW LIGHT-SIX COUPE-ROADSTER, while it holds a strong appeal for any prospective user, is particularly suited to the requirements of the doctor, the salesman, the field engineer or any other man whose professional or business duties demand a light-weight, economically-operated car for all-season use.

In reliability it is traditionally Studebaker. And the measure of public appreciation of this and other Studebaker models is indicated by the fact that Studebaker (with the exception of one manufacturer of a well known and very low priced car) led the world, during the first six months of 1921, in the number of automobiles produced and sold.

This is a Studebaker Year

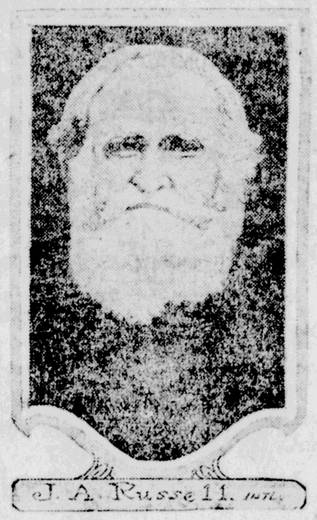
Op and Im.

Importunity may be Op's twin brother, as an exchange remarks, but the two have not the same characteristics. Op never hangs around insistently the way Im does.—Boston Transcript.

Snakes Run From Garlic.

In traveling through the swamps of Liberia the natives rub their bare feet with garlic and the smell is such as to send scurrying into the glades the most venomous reptiles.



J. A. Russell, of Lampasas, Texas, is one of the five centenarians of Texas. The young man, who is a veteran of the Mexican and Civil wars, is only 108 years old. He has been a railroad builder and a cattleman, and when he was 104 years young he took unto himself a second wife, who was a mere baby of fifty.

Keepers of Libraries.

Those who read many books are like the eaters of hashish. They live in a dream. The subtle poison that penetrates their brain renders them insensible to the real world and makes them the prey of terrible or delightful phantoms. Books are the opium of the Occident. They devour us. A day is coming on which we shall all be keepers of libraries, and that will be the end.—Anatole France.

Lifted Horizons.

While all melts under our feet, we may well grasp at any exquisite passion, or any contribution to knowledge that seems by a lifted horizon to set the spirit free for a moment, or any stirring of the senses, strange dyes, strange colors, and curious odors, or work of the artist's hands, or the face of one's friends.—Walter Pater, in The Renaissance.

Easy to Discover.

"What is space?" asks a headline in a daily paper. If the writer would only take the trouble to sit between two stout women in a crowded street car he would perhaps stop asking such silly questions.—London Punch.

Seek Origin of Granite.

Two Harvard geologists, Professors Reginald A. Daly and Charles Palache, accompanied by Dr. G. A. F. Molengraaf, a Dutch scientist, plan to spend the early months of 1922 in an expedition to South Africa to study unusual geological formations in that region, the university announced recently.

Dr. Fred E. Wright, petrologist of the geo-physical laboratory at Washington, will accompany the party as the representative of the Carnegie institution.

The chief object of the scientists, who plan to leave England next January, will be the study of a body of obtrusive rock north of Pretoria, and they hope that their investigations will shed some light on the origin of granite, which has long perplexed geologists.

Dr. Molengraaf was formerly chief geologist of the Transvaal republic. He has also done considerable work in the East Indies.

Photography as a Sculptor.

Baese, of Florence, Italy, invented a process for producing bas-reliefs by photography. The basis of the invention is the property possessed by a film of chromium gelatin of swelling in proportion to the intensity of the light falling upon it. The swelling is greater with low than with high intensity, so that the light passing through a photographic negative produces upon a chromium-gelatin plate a positive in distinct relief. The transparency of an ordinary negative, however, is not truly proportional to the relief of the original method, but by an ingenious automatic device, involving a double exposure, this difficulty is avoided, and a negative is obtained having its lights and shades correctly graded to produce the effect of relief.

Coal Could Do More Work.

Based upon the performance of 60 large locomotives operating over nearly 700 miles of route on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway, and on other facts of record, it has been estimated that the passenger and revenue freight tonnage of the United States could be hauled by electric locomotives for one-third the coal now burned under steam-engine boilers.

Salt and Gasoline.

Gasoline used in combination with salt is a good dry cleaner; salt absorbs the oiliness of the gasoline, as well as cutting into the badly soiled places. Dip the cloth first in the gasoline and then take up a little salt before rubbing garments.

HOW

DREADED "SLEEPING SICKNESS" MAY BE AVOIDED.—The British ministry of health has issued a bulletin on encephalitis lethargica (commonly but erroneously called "sleeping sickness") to which it appends the following advice as to precautions to be taken against it:

"The other occupants of a house in which a case of encephalitis has occurred or is being created may be assured that the disease is one of low infectivity, and that very little risk is run by association with the patient. At the same time it is desirable that such association should be limited to what is necessary for proper care and nursing, and the patient should be well isolated in a separate room.

"School children in the affected household may be kept from school, as a precautionary measure, for three weeks after the isolation of the patient. Those in contact with the case should be advised to use antiseptic nasal sprays or douches and to gargle the throat with solutions such as those advised for influenza.

"For example, any of the following may be used: (1) 1 per cent solution of peroxide of hydrogen; (2) a solution of permanganate of potash, 1 in 5,000 in .08 per cent solution of chloride of sodium (common salt); (3) liquor sodae chlorinatae, 0.5 per cent. These solutions can be used as ordinary gargles or snuffed up the nostrils or applied by an efficient spray.

"It is desirable that any persons in the infected household who suffer from sore throat or other symptoms suggesting an abortive attack should be treated from this point of view and isolated as far as possible until they have recovered. The sick room should be thoroughly cleansed and disinfected at the end of the illness."—Buffalo Express.

How Carbuncle Should Be Treated to Effect Cure That Can Be Considered Thorough.

At a recent examination by the state board of Ohio, medical students were asked how they would treat a carbuncle. The official answer is quoted from Rose & Carless' Manual of Surgery, as follows:

"The most thorough and satisfactory is to lay the carbuncle freely open under an anesthetic and scrape with a sharp spoon or cut away all sloughs until healthy tissue is reached, and then to disinfect the cavity thoroughly with pure carbolic acid or peroxide of hydrogen (10 volumes). The hollow thus formed is packed with gauze soaked in an iodoform emulsion (10 per cent.) and allowed to heal by granulation. Good food, iron, quinine and alcohol according to judgment, must be administered, while appropriate medicine (e. g., codeine or opium) and limitations of diet are necessary in diabetic patients."

How Sand Is Traveling.

French geologists have long taken interest in the eastward march of the sands along the northern coasts of France, Belgium and Holland, says the Christian Science Monitor. A fine sand originating on the shores of Normandy has been found distributed on the beaches as far east as Denmark. It was shown, after a careful investigation of this phenomenon, that the eastward march of the sands is due to the fact that all the sea waves approaching the coast from Brittany break in nearly parallel lines, with an easterly motion. The result is that the sands always progress in that direction. But the process is slow and gradual, and measurements have proved that the sand traverses, forward and backward, perpendicular to the shore, a total distance 8,000 times as great as that which it covers, in the same length of time, in its eastward progress.

How Life May Be Prolonged.

The publication of a monumental work by Viscount Bryce at the ripe age of eighty-three should persuade many of us who want to feel what it is like to be an octogenarian that old age can be attained without the aid of thyroid glands borrowed from the monkey. One of the secrets of old age would seem to be a lifetime of intellectual activity, and a lion's share of public service. It is quite astonishing the number of public men living at the present day who have passed their eightieth birthday. Lord Channing is in his eighty-first year, Viscount Morey is eighty-three, Mr. Frederic Harrison is close on ninety, Sir Harry Poland is still a vigorous letter writer, ninety-one, while the earl of Halsbury is ninety-seven, and possibly there are others.—London Chronicle.

TURKS MURDER 700,000 GREEKS

Charge Is Made by Legation at Washington.

KILLINGS AND DEPORTATIONS

These, With Famine, Said to Have Been Responsible for the Tragedy in Asia Minor—Work of Extermination of Entire Peaceful Population Is Pursued Right Before the Eyes of a Civilized World—Complain of Violations of Interallied Regulations.

Nearly 700,000 Greeks have been massacred, deported, or have died of famine since the war with Turkey began, according to a statement given out by the Greek legation at Washington. Half of these victims are said to have been Greeks of Pontus and the others were from the interior of Asia Minor. Part of the statement follows:

Tell of Persecution.

"American travelers and others just arriving here from Samsoun, said a dispatch from Constantinople, report horrible details of the persecution of Christian populations in that region. The notorious murderous chief, Osman Agha, arrived at Samsoun the second day of Bairam, a Turkish holiday similar to Easter, inaugurating his entry by the murder of ten Greeks. Then, surrounding the stores of the American Tobacco company, he arrested all the Greek clerks, numbering about 800, and had them transported to an unknown destination. The Greek quarter was then surrounded and 1,500 other Greeks arrested and deported to the interior.

"The population of 30 other villages in the Samsoun region were massacred while they were being transported to the place of exile. The Turkish authorities prohibited the use of the waters of the rivers contaminated by the bodies. Other villages, having refused to comply with the deportation order, were set on fire by the Turks, and the inhabitants, regardless of age and sex, were killed.

Burned Bones as Evidence.

"The American commission which went to this place reported these crimes and brought back burned bones, which were shown to the Turkish governor.

"Since the beginning of the war the Turks have exterminated by massacres, deportations and through famine more than 350,000 Greeks of the Pont (Pontus, district of Asia Minor bordering on the Black sea) and as many other Greeks from the interior of Asia Minor. This work of extermination of an entire peaceful population is pursued right before the eyes of a civilized world.

"The Ecumenic Patriarchate is much worried by reports which are constantly coming in from the Metropolitans, regarding massacres and persecution of Greeks in the interior. The Patriarchate is preparing for the British high commissioner a long memorandum showing in detail the Turkish crimes. At the same time the Patriarchate will call the attention of the interallied authorities to violations by the Turks of the regulations laid down by the interallied control at Constantinople in the arrest of Greeks coming from Ismid and other localities of Marmora, under the pretext that they had participated in activities against the Turks."

COW RECOGNIZES OWNER

Animal's Knowing Woman Decides Case in California Court.

The interesting case of a Holstein cow that strayed from its owner last December and whose ownership was disputed, has been settled in Judge Douglass' court at Manteca, Cal. The cow in question was claimed by Mrs. Eva Gustafson. Last December it wandered into the herd of Manuel Silveira, a dairyman on an adjoining farm. Silveira believed that the cow belonged to his herd and refused to allow it to be taken away.

The matter was brought to trial and in order to satisfy himself and those present that the cow rightfully belonged to Mrs. Gustafson, Constable J. W. Graves asked her to go up to the animal. The cow apparently had a good memory for faces and a kindly remembrance for her rightful owner. At least it allowed itself to be petted by Mrs. Gustafson, but could not be approached by Silveira or the constable.

The cow has been delivered to Mrs. Gustafson.

Trotzky Sees U. S.-British War.

A naval war between the United States and Great Britain as a result of maritime rivalry will occur in 1924, according to a prediction made by Leon Trotzky in addressing the Third Internationale at Moscow, says a dispatch to the London Daily Herald, the labor organ, from Moscow. "A swollen gourmand," was Trotzky's description of the United States, while he declared that Great Britain was losing her position of world significance, "the pound sterling having been vanquished by the almighty dollar."

Catches Fish From Cell.

John Monforte, Sing Sing inmate, fishing through the prison bars, caught a 17-pound carp. Guards had to open a gate and help Monforte land the fish.

Shoddy Sheep.

"I believe I'll go over and examine them sheep of Jupe's a little carefuller," said Mr. T—— to his wife; he's offered three of 'em for that yeller heifer, but knowin' him as I do I aim to be sure 'fore he gets her that their fleece ain't half cotton 'stead of all wool."—Youth's Companion.

GROWING CROPS IN ORCHARDS

Cost of Bringing Trees to Profitable Bearing Is Reduced and Cultivation Promoted.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

One of the difficulties of fruit growing, either as a main industry or as an incidental to general farming, is the length of time that must elapse before the orchard begins to yield returns. When, as in many sections in spring, a freeze destroys or greatly reduces the expected crop, the loss to many growers, including those who expected to harvest their first fruit in 1921, is likely to be serious. The loss under some conditions can be partly offset and other benefits can be gained by growing vegetable crops between the rows of young fruit trees, say specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Experienced orchardists frequently find it advantageous to grow crops between the tree rows until the trees reach bearing age. After bearing begins it is impracticable to "double-crop" an orchard. As a rule, intercropping cannot be practiced in a peach orchard after the third season from planting. Six to eight years is usually the limit for an apple orchard, the exact time depending on the variety, vigor and growth, and other factors. Further, the trees will usually shade the ground too much for the growing of vegetable crops by the time the ages mentioned are reached.

In an "off year," with an orchard that is expected to come into bearing for the first time, many fruit growers will find it to their advantage to plant crops of potatoes, corn, soy beans, cowpeas, shell-beans, or sweet potatoes in states where they can be raised between the orchard rows. The growing of potatoes, however, in an orchard in the "northern fruit belt" is a doubtful practice, since the digging of them amounts practically to a late cultivation of the ground, and under some conditions this might stimulate a late growth of the trees, which would be undesirable. In this way the farmer can utilize about half the space of his orchard land without injury to the trees or seriously hampering the temporary crop. Tomatoes and other truck crops may also be grown in the orchard. These are sometimes classed as "catch crops"—crops planted for a quick growth.

Where such catch crops are planted it is well first to make a hasty survey of the operations of other farmers in the vicinity and of the available market, since often where similar conditions prevail throughout an entire locality there is a tendency for many farmers to enter on a certain line of temporary agriculture, with the result that the supply far exceeds the local demand. A little foresight may prevent disappointment.

These rows between the trees are somewhat more difficult to cultivate than in the open field, and may require considerable handwork, but in many cases the crops which are planted yield a comfortable profit.

The intercropping of young orchards has an additional purpose besides the mere direct financial gain. It furnishes an incentive to keep the orchard cultivated, and as a rule this is highly desirable from the standpoint of the trees.

An off year furnishes a good time to put the orchard in order by close pruning, such as the orchardist could not easily afford if it meant reduction in bearing surface.

Profit may sometimes be found in a sowed crop. Buckwheat is often a good thing when sowed among young trees. The buckwheat may not pay to harvest for grain, but if mowed before fully mature it makes a good mulch, or if permitted to mature enough grain may be obtained to materially cut down the expenditure for poultry feed. Buckwheat can be sown in June or even in July and still make a satisfactory growth. Field peas, cowpeas and various other crops that make good forage can be used as occasion suggests, and the soil be improved thereby.

The fruit grower should realize that it is the abuse rather than the use of double-cropping systems that may result adversely to the trees. And again, an interplanted crop which is to be harvested and not used entirely for soil improvement should be looked upon as a means of reducing the expense of maintaining the trees rather than a crop which represents a definite cash income.

The Dark Ages.

The Dark ages is the term applied to that portion of the Middle ages which reached from the decline of classical learning to the renaissance. It embraces the period from the Fifth to the Fifteenth, or more narrowly, from the Fifth to the Eleventh century.

BOY SCOUTS

(Conducted by National Council of the Boy Scouts of America.)

SCOUTING AND LOYALTY

A boy is naturally a loyal young animal. He will stick to his "gang" through thick and thin, will never "go back" on a chum, no matter at what cost to himself, and scouting, dealing as usual with fundamental boy instincts, makes use of this natural tendency, turns it to constructive ends. In scouting, boy loyalty is both taken account of and developed. Loyalty to the patrol, the troop, the scoutmaster, go over into loyalty to the community, to home and church and school, to God and country as pledged by the scout oath.

No one who has ever seen a troop of boy scouts taking the oath of allegiance to the flag, grave, earnest, sincere, can doubt that here are Americans in the making to whom the Stars and Stripes are not merely a strip of gay-colored bunting, but stand for something real and true, something worth dying for, if need be.

Scouts are being trained in citizenship which means not only that they know the history of this country and how its laws are made, but that they stand ready to serve the nation in whatever ways a boy may. Co-operating in a nation-wide Forest Protection week, as they did in May last, fighting forest fires, planting trees, aiding in city clean-ups and health surveys, fighting gypsy moths and bagworms and fungus blights, sharing in efforts at wild life conservation, aiding the police in directing traffic, serving as firemen's aides, etc., they are practicing citizenship here and now, are learning it, by living it, day by day.

Everywhere we are seeing today war's dangerous aftermath of lawlessness, especially among our youth. Scouting offers one of the best antidotes for this ill, for a scout stands for law and order. Scouts learn to obey, not as "blind driven cattle," but as good citizens who recognize the necessity and reasonableness of law. A scout executive in West Virginia recently examined the court records of his town for ten years back and found that not a single scout or a boy under scout influence had ever passed through the court, and similar records are every now and then reported from various parts of the country. A scout is loyal—too loyal to be a law breaker.

Ours is a great country and has great problems to meet. No one can tell what the next few years will hold, but we can be sure of one thing, that no nation can be stronger than its men, and that every bit of splendid volunteer leadership in the work of making men "physically strong, mentally awake, morally straight," will count immeasurably for good and as the best sort of patriotic service. "Save a man, you save one person. Save a boy, you save a whole multiplication table."

HEROIC WORK IN PUEBLO FLOOD

Among the many instances of heroic service in rescue work during the Pueblo flood disasters, that of two boy scouts stands out conspicuously. On hearing that a man and his young son were trapped in a burning building, surrounded by the ever rising tides of onrushing water, they hastily manned a lifeboat and pulled through the dangerous current to the burning building. The owner of the place and his son were rescued with great risk, not only because of the floods but because the burning building was being shaken by terrific explosions all the time from the lime stored therein. Having discovered that three employees were also in the burning plant, the scouts returned a second time, battling desperately with the waters, and got the other victims also to safety. Hardly had they gotten into the boat when another more violent explosion occurred and the building crumbled and fell into the water.

MOTHER DESERVES GOOD TURN

A Washington, D. C., Scoutmaster in speaking of the good turn says: "One fellow more entitled to our good turn and courteous and loving consideration than any other is MOTHER. She has done a whole lot for us. On our account she has given up parties and pleasures, pretty dresses, warm coats and new hats. She has sat up nights to care for us or mend our clothes. She has worked and prayed for us. In fact there doesn't seem to be anything she has not done for us and we can't even half repay her. Any scout who lets a whole day pass without doing something to make mother glad is a scout who fails to live up to the standard of Troop 33."

DO PRACTICAL MAP WORK.

One of the requirements for a first class boy scout is to be able to read a map correctly, and draw, from field notes made on the spot, an intelligible rough sketch map, indicating by their proper marks important buildings, roads, trolley lines, main landmarks, principal elevations, etc. All this involves no small amount of practical skill and field work and in many places map-work classes are conducted for scouts.

Use for Clocks.

The small, worn-out clock can be useful in the sickroom if the face is still intact. After a dose of medicine is given the hands should be turned to denote the time when the next one is due.

Mary Pickford

Mary Pickford is seen here as Little Lord Fauntleroy, the role she is playing in a new movie production now being filmed.

Style in Writing.

In style, as in other things, it is well always to aim at the combination of as many excellences as possible—opposite excellences, it may be—those other beauties of prose. A busy age will hardly educate its writers in correctness. Let its writers take time to write English more as a learned language; and completing that correction of style which had only gone a certain way in the last century, raise the general level of language towards their own.—Pater.

ON-A-JOB, OFF-A-JOB JIM

Being a Story Of how Jim got on a job and why he got off it again.

"You can get work around here, if you try the Lowell Farm," stated old Joe, as Jim bade him goodbye. "Noticed t'other day how the fruit trees they set out a couple of years ago needed pruning. You could get the job if you wanted it bad."

"I want it all right, but I don't know a thing about pruning."

"You'll know sufficient if you listen to me for three minutes. Pruning's a stunt that you ketch onto mighty quick, if you know a few of the principles Open up the head of a tree, so the sunlight can get into the center. Cut back long sprawling branches, and nip off the suckers that grow out of the trunk and limbs. Then use yer brains!"

"Couldn't I hurt the tree?"

"Don't worry about that. Just remember that when you saw off a branch, paint over the stub to keep the sap from running out and the bugs from making a nest in the wound."

"It seems sort of cheeky to—"

"Cheek is what folks need nowadays Push yerself ahead, make places fer yourself, and if you can deliver the goods, as I'm thinkin' yer can, yer conscience don't need to trouble yer."

Taking Joe's advice, Jim hastened toward the farm, glad of the prospect of work near at hand. He knocked several times at the rear door before it was opened by a plump, rosy-faced woman in overalls.

"Is the manager of the farm around?" asked Jim.

"I'm it; manager, owner and chief boss," was the hearty reply. "What can I do for you?"

"I want to work on your trees. They need pruning. I need work Couldn't we both be given a chance?"

"Know anything about pruning?"

"Not much. Perhaps enough to do a passable job. Besides—I won't charge much."

"There are tools in the shed. Help yourself." The woman nodded toward the tool shed. Jim obeyed orders, such as they were. He found a pair of overalls, pruning shears, saw, a can of paint.

After a little practice Jim quickly saw where to cut. It was interesting work, and as he proceeded from tree to tree he forgot about his trying to land a new job every other day, and lived wholly in the present. Suddenly he was aroused by the cheery voice of his employer.

"Don't you ever eat, Mr. Pruner?"

"I sure do, Mistress Farmer," and Jim realized for the first time the cavity within.

"How are your ears, then?"

"Ears? The last time I examined them they were O. K. Why?"

"The dinner bell's been ringing till even the cows protest. Don't you know what a diner bell means?"

"I say, you are good, coming all this way for me. I won't keep you waiting another moment."

"You haven't told me your name," the woman stated, as they crossed the field together.

"I beg your pardon. I'm Jim Lawrence."

"Jim? Very good, Jim I'm Molly. Just Molly to my friends, and to you, I guess, Jim," she added, as she passed through the door he held open for her. "You'd better plan to remain here the rest of the summer."

SISSON FOR WIDER STORM KING ROAD

A delegation from the Ulster County Automobile Club was present Tuesday when State Highway Commissioner Herbert F. Sisson, First Deputy Sayre and Commissioner Partridge of the Interstate Park made an inspection of the new Storm King highway, which, when completed, will link up the existing highways on the western bank of the Hudson, making a continuous river road on the west bank. Those present from Kingston were President William R. Harrison, of the Automobile Club, Secretary Meinhardt, Alonzo Winne, Chris Winne, Elva Bogart and S. D. M. Hudson, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce.

A meeting was held at the Palatine Hotel at Newburgh, where the visitors were the guests of the Newburgh Automobile Club. Commissioner Sisson addressed members of chambers of commerce and automobile clubs of Peekskill, Newburgh, Middletown, Poughkeepsie and Kingston before visiting the highway in Cornwall with Contractor John L. Hayes, who blasted the new roadway around Storm King Mountain where it skirts the ciff above the Hudson river.

In his talk to the business men Commissioner Sisson said he could not substitute concrete pavement for macadam without enactment of the legislature, but that he would do what he could to widen the roadway to eighteen feet. When this famous highway is completed the automobile route from New York to Newburgh on the west shore of the Hudson will be shortened about twenty miles.

The French have already threatened to occupy the Ruhr if Germany balks at accepting the Silesian decision.

AUTO HIT TRUCK AT BAD CORNER

In making the turn from East Strand into Broadway at the Connelly drug store corner about 1 o'clock today a young man named Bence from Ulster Park bumped head-on into the rear of a truck of Archie Winter's express standing not far from the corner, this truck being pushed into the rear of another truck of the Winter express line. The damage was the bending of the mudgard on the Bence car and the front mudguard of the express truck when it rammed into the rear end of the truck that stood ahead of it.

The practice of parking autos too close to a corner like the corner of Broadway and East Strand is a dangerous one, that place being the scene of close calls quite frequently, as there is not room for an auto going up Broadway to pass between the parking autos and the trolley track.

COOLER WEATHER GOOD FOR CROPS

Weather conditions for the week ending August 9 were generally favorable for crop growth and farm operations except in the north where practically no rain fell and drought conditions are again serious, according to the summary of weather and crop conditions sent out from the Ithaca office of the weather bureau. Cooler weather prevailed during the week and minimum temperatures as low as 44 degrees occurred over the more elevated sections of the state. Generally heavy rains fell over the central and southern counties.

Crops, as a result, are about two weeks ahead of the average. The oat and barley harvest is about completed and thrashing is in progress. The yield of oats is generally reported as light. Corn continues good to excellent although the cool weather checked somewhat its unusually rapid development of the past several weeks. Late potatoes appear to be doing well except in the north. Buckwheat is in full bloom and looking fine. Pastures are generally improved except over the northern counties.

18 MILLION RUSSIANS STARVE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, Aug. 10.—Eighteen millions of Russians are facing death in the famine district, according to the latest estimate received today from Riga.

The starvation zone is 800 miles long, stretching along the middle and lower Volga valleys.

The cholera cases now number 40,000.

Eighty per cent of the cholera victims are residents of towns. The population of the district infected with cholera is about 500,000.

It is believed that Russia, outside of the actual famine zone, has enough food to last six weeks.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Aug. 10.—There was little interest in the stock market in the early trading today and changes in prices continued irregular. U. S. Steel was off ¼ at 73⅝. Northern Pacific rose ⅛ to 75⅛. Famous Players was unchanged at 50. Mexican Petroleum receded ¼ to 102½. American Woolen declined ¼ to 63¾. Pan-American Petroleum declined ¼ to 46⅝. Baldwin Locomotive advanced ½ to 75¼. Pacific Oil was unchanged at 34½. Atlantic Gulf declined ⅝ to 21¼. General Motors was off ⅝ at 10⅜. Great Northern preferred was up ¼ to 73¼.

Pressure on leading stocks increased during the first hour of trading, causing substantial losses in a number of issues. Mexican Petroleum became the weakest feature, falling over three points to 99½ and was followed on the decline by Pan-American Petroleum and General Asphalt. Kelly-Springfield Tire was also in supply falling over 1 point to 39⅛. Weakness developed in a number of other quarters, Baltimore and Ohio becoming prominent and falling over 1 point to 36⅝. Baldwin after selling at 75¼ at the opening, yielded to 73¾. Studebaker sold down ¾ to 73¾ but later rallied to 74⅝. Fractional losses were sustained in many other leading railroads and industrials. Trading was extremely small. Atlantic Gulf continued under the influence of the unfavorable statement published this morning and yielded to 20¼ a loss of more than 1 point.

The market closed nervous and unsettled; government bonds unchanged; railway and other bonds irregular.

FREEMAN FINDS SCHIMECK FAMILY

was missing. Her dress was lying on the floor and the man's clothing she had worn when she came in January were missing from the closet where they had been placed. A note on the table stated that she was too unhappy to live longer at home and was going away.

Later the family received a letter stating that she intended to work as a waiter at the Kutcher boarding house at Monticello and to send any letters there addressed to "J. Brown." The correspondence since had been conducted in German.

"They are both crazy," said Mrs. Schimeck, "both Lena and Mary. Lena spent every cent she earned on Mary and was willing to do it again only she wanted to save money to buy a farm for herself. She said she could work harder and earn more money if she dressed like a man. Ever since she was a little girl she wanted to dress like a man. She used to put on her father's overcoat and any pants or coat she could find and say she was going to be a man when she grew up. And she's strong, too. She is good looking even with her hair cut short," and she displayed a duplicate of a photograph published in New York city newspapers of this morning. "That was her gypsy costume," she explained, "only she had a skirt to go with it that we made after she came here in January, and I thought she would give up pants altogether."

Among the exhibits produced in New York by Mary, the waitress, was a letter reading as follows:

"Kingston, N. Y., May 21, 1921.

"Dear Mary:

I am sorry to say what I have to. Will you please send me the ring with the name Schimeck, because Carolyn took it away from my father and my father got it for a present from his best friend. Our address is R. F. D. 2, Box 8, Kingston, N. Y. Please send it. I am sorry.

Your friend,

Edwin Schimeck.

P.S.—Hope this will reach you in best of health. Best regards from us all to you. Answer, please."

"You wrote that," said Edwin Schimeck, 16 years old, turning to his fifteen year old sister, Stephne, as the children read a morning newspaper which was taken to the house by a Freeman reporter.

"Why did you do it?" asked The Freeman reporter.

Stephne laughed and said she did write it and had signed her brother's name to it.

"Why did you do it?" asked The Freeman reporter.

"It belonged to my father and we wanted it back," replied the girl.

Meanwhile telegraph despatches from Monticello announce that "Jack Brown" is at Monticello, working in the Kutcher boarding house, where "he" denies even having heard of "Carolyn Schimeck," and says "he" came North three years ago from Tillery, North Carolina.

DeLong-DeWitt.

The ceremony uniting in marriage Miss Floence DeWitt and George Emory DeLong was performed on Saturday evening at 7:30 o'clock by the Rev. D. M. Hunter, in the home of the bride at 8 High street, Newburgh. About fifty guests were present including relatives and friends. John E. DeWitt, brother of the bride gave her away in marriage. Miss Ella Field DeWitt, a sister, and Miss Ruth Van Ingen of Brooklyn, a college class-mate, were the bridesmaids, and Miss Kathrine Field acted as flower girl, while Frank Hawkins served the groom as best man. Warren Brown presided at the piano and played the wedding march as the bridal procession entered the spacious drawing rooms which were prettily decorated with palms and ferns. The bride looked charming in her gown of imported French organdie, trimmed with point de'esprit lace and veil, and carried a bouquet of white bridal roses. The bridesmaid and flower girl were attired in gowns of pink organdie and carried pink roses. After the ceremony there followed a reception and congratulations were extended to the young couple. The bride is a teacher of modern languages in the Cornwall High School. She is the daughter of the late Dr. John H. DeWitt of Saugerties, and comes from talented and noted ancestry, of which she is a worthy representative. Mr. DeLong is of descent and is a rising young contractor. After a trip, Mr. and Mrs. DeLong will make their home with the bride's mother, Mrs. Lucy DeWitt 8 High street. The couple received many beautiful presents. Mrs. DeLong is a niece of the late D. M. DeWitt and a cousin of Postmaster William C. DeWitt of this city.

THROAT CUT IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Young Brooklyn Girl Gashed by Glass From Ear to Ear When Car Struck Post but Vital Artery Was Missed and After Many Stitches She is on Road to Recovery.

Miss Penelope Econoponly, aged 14, of Brooklyn, a Greek, had a most narrow escape from being killed on Tuesday afternoon at Stone Ridge, while riding in a Winton-Six touring car. In evading a Ford car coming out of a side road the driver of the Winton struck a post. Miss Econoponly, who was seated in the rear seat, was jolted forward when the car hit the post and her neck struck a small glass windshield that was at the back of the chauffeur, breaking the glass. She sustained a deep cut under her chin from ear to ear, the thyroid gland being cut as was the outside jugular veins and the glass even cut into the "Adam's apple." Besides she received cuts on the right side of her face. She bled considerably and first aid attention was given the wounds by a doctor at Stone Ridge, who after closing the wounds by bandages had her rushed to this city and the Kingston City Hospital. Dr. Frank Johnston went to the hospital with her and sewed up the cut in the throat, many stitches being required. The young lady stood the ordeal unflinchingly. She is being cared for by two nurses and it is expected to be able to go to her home in Brooklyn in a few days.

MULFORD DISCHARGED.

Was Accused of Violating Mullan-Gage Law.

At a hearing held before Justice Chidester Monday afternoon, in the case of C. Leslie Mulford of Saugerties, charged with violation of the Mullan-Gage law, Col. Raphael Eagan of Newburgh, William D. Brinnier, Sr., of this city and Grant M. Brinnier appeared as attorneys for Mulford. The district attorney's office was represented by Chris J. Flanagan of this city. Mulford's attorneys contended that the information upon which he was taken into custody was defective and did not charge the commission of a crime and that although Mulford's permit to sell wholesale had expired, he had made application for another which was pending and that U. S. Commissioner Collins of Newburgh had ruled that he was entitled to keep the liquors pending the granting of the application, and then moved for his discharge. Attorney Flanagan made an argument in opposition to the contention of Mulford's attorneys. At the conclusion of the argument, however, Justice Chidester granted the motion of Mulford's attorneys and he was discharged.

BEATS MARY'S FAMOUS LAMB

Woolly Lawn Mower Proved of Practical Value to Cincinnati Man During Hot Spell.

Louis Goecke, better known as "Pat" in amateur circles, was mowing the grass on the lawn of his home in Cincinnati recently. In the course of the work he was cutting alongside a hedge with a pair of clippers.

"Ba-a-a," came from the other side of the hedge.

Goecke looked up. A neighbor was sitting on the porch reading.

Goecke resumed his clipping.

"Ba-a-a!" sounded again.

Goecke straightened up and shot fierce glances at his neighbor. But the latter's face was concealed back of the newspaper.

The clipping proceeded, and then again came "Ba-a-a!"

Finally Goecke threw down his clippers, stepped to the neighbor's porch, and said:

"Are you guying me?"

The other looked up with surprise. "Guying you? Why, no! What makes you think so?"

"Well, stop that 'baa-ing!'" Goecke said.

"Oh, that's it. I'll show you what that is," and the neighbor went back among the bushes and pulled out a lamb. "I bought it yesterday," he explained.

Immediately Goecke was seized with an idea. "Lend it to me, will you?" he asked. The neighbor was obliging. The lamb finished the grass cutting job, and Goecke enjoyed the cool and quiet of a shady nook on his porch.

GREATEST IN PLAINS STATES

Matter of Farm Risks Established by Records Kept by the Department of Agriculture.

Risks in the production of three great staple crops—corn, wheat and oats—are greatest in the plains states, extending from Texas to North Dakota. This general fact is established by the average deviation of the yield per acre from the average yield, computed by the bureau of crop estimates, Department of Agriculture, for these three crops for each state from the records of 50 years.

On the other hand, the North Atlantic and the western states are regions of comparatively low risk, or deviation of yield per acre from the average, for wheat and oats, and the entire Atlantic coast and the west for corn.

The great corn belt, with its enormous production and surplus above local consumption, is, after all, prominently subject to risks of weather, insects and disease in the production of crops, and, while it would be going too far to say of this region as a whole that the results of its agriculture are either "a feast or a famine," yet there is a tendency in this direction as the area covered by the average becomes more restricted to county, township and individual farm.

Defense, Then Prosecution Rests.

Mr. Shanigan inserted his key quietly; walked softly, undressed silently and crept into bed.

All his precautions were in vain. Mrs. Shanigan had been awake listening and waiting for him. She told him she supposed he had been working at the office again; that she did not believe that story or any other he had ever told her; that she did not have to put up with him; that she could have a career; that even now the committee was waiting to see if she would accept the nomination for mayor; that she had been warned against him; that she was not now the foolish sentimental girl she was when she married him, and then a deep snore showed that—

The defense rested.

Now everyone knows the prosecution should rest first; so Mrs. Shanigan jabbed Mr. Shanigan with her elbow; shook him; fussed, fumed, scolded and wept; but it was no use. He slept on, soundly.

The prosecution also rested.—Katherine Negley, in Judge.

Primitive People.

The natives of St. Hilda, in the Hebrides, have decided to abandon a quaint custom which they have followed for more than a century, of electing their own queen. Hereafter they will take the natural descendant. They have deposed Queen Margot and will recognize Mary as their sovereign. This news comes as the first communication from the island since last September and was brought to London by a vessel which delivered census papers at the island. The natives there speak only Gaelic, but the census papers were printed in English. Otherwise the chief happenings on the island include an influenza epidemic, which caused many deaths. Persons aboard the ship who could converse with the natives said the chief question on the island was whether the war had broken out again.

Mrs. Madalynne Obenchain a pretty divorcee, of Chicago, and Arthur Burch, son of an Evanston, Ill., minister, are being held pending the outcome of the police investigation into the mysterious murder of J. Belton Kennedy, wealthy Los Angeles broker, who was shot from ambush when he was about to enter his home. According to the police, Mrs. Obenchain was walking with Kennedy at the time he was shot. Burch, who had been in Los Angeles, was arrested in Nevada while on his way to his home. He was taken back to Los Angeles. Ralph B. Obenchain, prominent Chicago lawyer, says he is ready to forgive his former wife and will stand by her. Mr. Obenchain is alleged to have told the police that it was his wife's love for Kennedy that broke up their home.

Mental Composition Habitual With Most Great Writers.

As a Result Their Thoughts Are Easily Marshaled When They Sit at Their Desks.

At least one great writer, Wordsworth, composed in his head, without pencil or paper.

We are given a whimsical picture of his sister, Dorothy, trailing the gaunt old man over the Cumbrian hills, notebook in hand, jotting down as best she could his inspired dictation.

Of course, few would care to emulate his method. Formal composition, for most scribes, is better done on paper where the elusive phrase is permanently recorded, the fugitive word captured, the form and cadence of the thing made obvious to the eye.

Yet, in another sense mental composition has been habitual with all great writers who have been generous enough to disclose their habits of thought.

They instinctively think in words. Under the elm tree, along the trout stream, even in the thoroughfares and work shops of life, they are coining phrases, silently casting what they think and set into appropriate language, fitting and discarding adjective and verb in the eternal search for perfect expression.

Freckled newsboys, sunsets, traffic jams, symphonies, even the abstract meditations of reverie, pass into their minds as phrases, to sink, apparently forgotten, into the storehouse of the unconscious mind.

When such men sit down to write they have no need to brush the cobwebs from a neglected vocabulary. The joints of expression are not stiff and squeaky from long disuse.

They have spun the glorious skein in wayward hours, and when loom-time comes there remains only the weaving of the pattern.

One November evening, many years ago, three men were crossing a heath on the outskirts of London. On a hill ahead of them stood a church with a tall spire. Suddenly the sun broke through a bank of clouds and illuminated its gold cross.

The autumnal silence around them, the reminiscent savor of the heath, the peculiar moodiness of the season and the hour, the ominous gloom of the sky, the red shaft of sunset lighting the distant cross—all conspired to arouse a peculiar sense of awe in the spectators.

Yet only one word was spoken—a reverent, spontaneous exclamation—"Calvary!"

And the man who said it was Thackeray.

He had merely revealed, half audibly, the impassioned search for inevitable words that ever goes on in the mind of the artist.

Perhaps it's a gift, or an obsession, this thinking eternally in words. Perhaps normal mental processes would be blocked and embarrassed by such a habit.

But it would at least seem lamentable that in conversation, a training ground in which all spend so many hours, there should be so little conscious effort to speak with grace and precision, so habitual a mouthing of stock phrases, banal flippances and current slang.

We should go to school to the Tennessee mountaineers where generic speech, through social isolation, has been able in its humble way to survive.—Milwaukee Journal.

Walter Scott's First Love.

The young woman in Walter Scott's first love affair was Miss Williamena Belches, the daughter of a baronet, and when she and Scott were nineteen years old they met for the first time by accident. Scott at that time was merely the apprentice to his father, who was a solicitor, and no very lordly one at that. After the young persons had been seen much in each other's company, Scott, senior, waited upon Sir John Belches and told him that the affair ought not to be allowed to proceed without his sanction. The young woman, it is presumed, satisfied her father that she had no thought whatever of accepting Walter, although they continued to correspond and to meet frequently. At one time there was an understanding between them that Scott seemed to accept as an engagement, but the young woman did not, and eventually she chose a husband whose prospects were more imposing.

Flying Torpedoes.

Experiments, throwing a new light on the problems of aerial war, are reported as having been taking place with great secrecy near Paris.

Small heavier-than-air machines, really torpedoes with wings, are sent up into the air under their own power, and entirely pilotless, and are then controlled by wireless telegraphy.

Machines are flown for considerable distances and made to carry out manoeuvers while under wireless direction from the ground.

A further development contemplated is for a machine to be portrayed by means of which a pilot in an airplane can control the movements of one of these air torpedoes.

This would mean that after a torpedo had been launched and controlled up to a certain height by the land station, its direction would be taken over by a pilot in a special airplane, who would send it on ahead until he had guided it to its target, he himself remaining at some distance.

Prevent a Black Eye.

When a child has had a fall or received a blow which is likely to cause a black eye, the best remedy is to bathe the parts for two or three inches around the eye every few minutes for an hour.

Last "Victory" Recovered.

Dust-covered and forgotten, two big packing cases have been reposing in the yard of federal parliament house. They had been received twelve months ago from London, and had been "dumped" with other stores in an out-of-the-way place. Recently one of the cases was opened and was found to contain a female figure in bronze with a helmet on her head. This was intended to represent Victory and was designed to commemorate the heroism of Australian soldiers. The statue was a gift of the commonwealth by Bertram Mackennal, the Australian sculptor. The smaller case contained the base of the statue. The unfortunate oversight has been rectified and Australia's thanks have been sent to Mr. Mackennal.

Engineering Triumph.

A daring engineering feat was performed in Pittsburgh recently when a nine-story modern building, filled with hardware, was moved a distance of 75 feet by 12 laborers. Ninety-pound rails, 120 of them, made the tracks on which the structure was moved. The sidewalks and basement of the building, including a big engine and boiler that continued to function, went along with the building. Customers passed to and from the building as though nothing was happening.

Proves Wisdom of Hesiod.

The many prove the wisdom of Hesiod, who says that the road to wickedness is smooth and very short, and there is no need of perspiring; but before virtue the immortal gods have placed the sweat of labor, and long and steep is the way thither, and rugged at first; but when you have reached the top, then, however difficult, it becomes easy.—Plato.

Worthiness.

A man can bear a world's contempt when he has that within him which says he's worthy.—Alexander Smith.

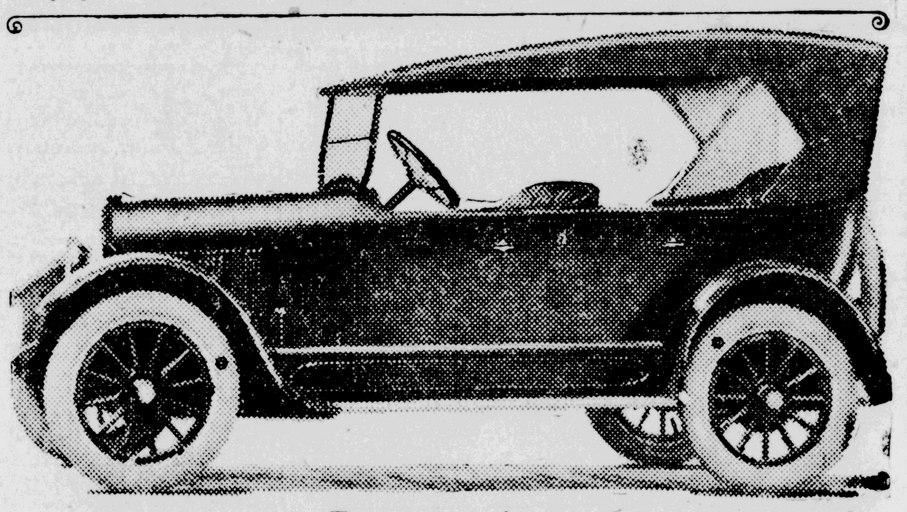
BUICK

Authorized Buick Service — Emblem of Satisfaction



Presenting
The New Buick Four

The new Buick Four is a distinctively Buick creation in every feature of design and construction. It embodies those principles of construction that have characterized Buick automobiles for more than twenty years.

The engine is of the famed Buick Valve-in-Head type. The bore is 3⅜"—the stroke, 4¾". Wheel base, 109", turning radius, 36'.

A Marvel carburetor with the new automatic heat control insures proper vaporization of the common low grade of commercial gasoline.

Multiple disc clutch, the transmission and universal joint are of standard Buick construction—the universal joint being lubricated from the transmission.

The rear axle is the three-quarter floating type, with semi-elliptical type springs front and rear. The frame is a deep channel section, strongly re-inforced with four cross members.

High pressure Alemite system provides lubrication. Delco equipment with Exide battery insures efficient starting, lighting and ignition.

All models have non-glare headlights—all are complete with tire carrier and extra rim. Closed models are equipped with adjustable windshield visors, windshield cleaner, dome light, ventilating windshield, adjustable windows, and sun shade in rear window.

"Well, so he did," insisted Johnny. "He had his arm—"

"John," screamed the mother, frantically.

"Why," whined the boy. "I was—"

"John," said his father sternly, "leave the room."

And Johnny left, crying as he went: "I was only going to say that he had his army clothes on."

Peter Manning Breaks Record.

Thomas Murphy of Poughkeepsie, the well known track driver of the Cleveland grand circuit races, Tuesday drove Peter Manning, the five-year-old gelding, a mile in 2:00¼, doing the half mile in 59½ seconds. The record was made in an attempt to lower 2:02½, the trotting record for five-year-old geldings established by Chimo in Columbus in 1909. Murphy has also the distinction of driving the fastest two miles trotted this year.

Ireland's Many Names.

Scots may be surprised, but in the days of Ptolemy Ireland was known as Scotia! In fact Ireland has had a number of names. Diodorus Siculus calls the Ireland Irin, or Irini; in the De Mundo, credited by some scholars to Aristotle, it is called Ierne; in the Argonautica of Orpheus it appears as Iriana; Strabo called it Iverie; Caesar, Tacitus and Pliny mentioned it as Hiberia; Mela called it Juverna. The native names in Celtic are Ir, Eri, Erin. Plutarch mentions it under the name of Ogygia.

As to Cerebral Structure.

So far as cerebral structure goes, it is clear that men differ less from the chimpanzee and orang than these do even from the monkeys, and that the difference between the brain of the chimpanzee and of man is almost insignificant, when compared with that between the chimpanzee brain and that of a lemur.—J. W. Carve, M. D.

VIOLA DANA in CINDERELLA'S TWIN

By LUTHER REED

Childhood and Age with all the years between, will take delight in this fantastic, bright romance of a wonder girl and her wonder night.

IS RESTLESS AGE

Children Only Follow the Example of Their Parents.

Newspaper Asks the Pertinent Question Whether It Is Not Time to Stop and Think.

"The poor little rich girl" is no fiction as is demonstrated from time to time when surveys are taken of children to determine the causes of malnutrition and over-fatigue. The children of the wealthy or well-to-do more often than the children of the poor are found to be under weight or nervous. Sometimes the trouble is due to careless or improper feeding though oftener to the complexity of modern life, says Dr. Borden S. Veeder of St. Louis, speaking before the section on the diseases of children at the meeting of the American Medical association, in session in Boston, the Oklahoman states.

"My little girl never has a leisure hour—in fact, she is just as busy as I am," said a mother to me one day.

"We just cannot keep our children at home in the evening," said another mother. "We have made a rule that they could not go out to parties or clubs except on Friday and Saturday nights, but we find we cannot enforce it."

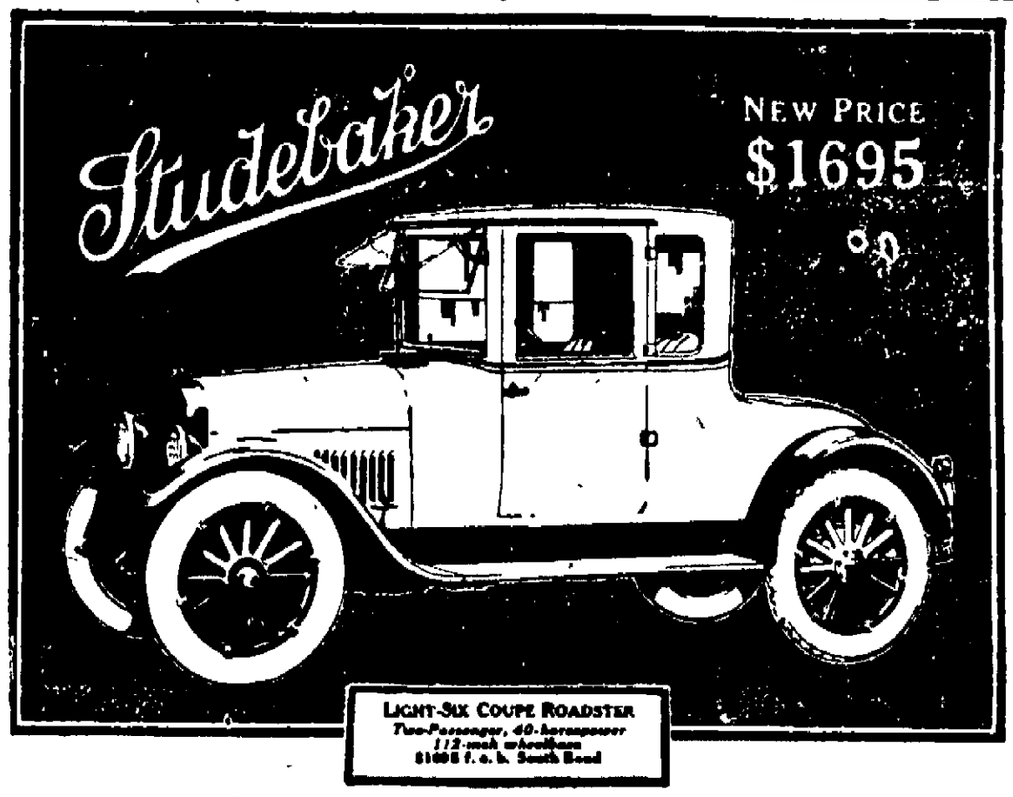
It's the same old story—keeping up with Lizzie.

If your neighbor's child must be on the "go" continually, then, in order to keep the pace, your child must follow that silly example. At least that seems to be the popular supposition—keep up with Lizzie if you undermine your health, if you fail to secure a sound education, if you prepare for failure instead of success.

It is not surprising if the children and young people of today are eternally restless, if they never are content to remain at home, if they find life intolerable when their days and nights are not crowded with pleasure and amusements. Children always follow the example of their parents. When the mother belongs to three or four card clubs, a literary club or two, attends luncheons, teas and dinners, plays golf, sits on committees, dabbles a little in politics, what can you expect of the children? Growing up in an atmosphere where there is no quiet or repose, it is inevitable that children should be restless, continually seeking after new excitements, competing socially with those in their own circle, bent on being seen everywhere and having a good time at all costs. When a mother who is always going about remonstrates with her children for making so many engagements, that they have no time either for the necessary amount of rest or study, it is not surprising that her remarks carry no conviction.

When either children or adults spend their lives rushing from one place to another, from one pleasure to another, what have they, in the end, to show for their scattering of energy, their expenditure of time?

Women today are highly organized in culture clubs, patrons' clubs, and civic societies. Why do they not get together on this problem of conserving the time and energy of their children, saving a part of it from the eternal program of joy rides, dances, clubs and picture shows?



THE NEW LIGHT-SIX COUPE-ROADSTER, while it holds a strong appeal for any prospective user, is particularly suited to the requirements of the doctor, the salesman, the field engineer or any other man whose professional or business duties demand a light-weight, economically-operated car for all-season use.

In reliability it is traditionally Studebaker. And the measure of public appreciation of this and other Studebaker models is indicated by the fact that Studebaker (with the exception of one manufacturer of a well known and very low priced car) led the world, during the first six months of 1921, in the number of automobiles produced and sold.

J. A. Russell, of Lampasas, Texas, is one of the five centenarians of Texas. The young man, who is a veteran of the Mexican and Civil wars, is only 108 years old. He has been a railroad builder and a cattleman, and when he was 104 years young he took unto himself a second wife, who was a mere baby of fifty.

Keepers of Libraries.

Those who read many books are like the eaters of hashish. They live in a dream. The subtle poison that penetrates their brain renders them insensible to the real world and makes them the prey of terrible or delightful phantoms. Books are the opium of the Occident. They devour us. A day is coming on which we shall all be keepers of libraries, and that will be the end.—Anatole France.

Lifted Horizons.

While all melts under our feet, we may well grasp at any exquisite passion, or any contribution to knowledge that seems by a lifted horizon to set the spirit free for a moment, or any stirring of the senses, strange dyes, strange colors, and curious odors, or work of the artist's hands, or the face of one's friends.—Walter Pater, in The Renaissance.

Easy to Discover.

"What is space?" asks a headline in a daily paper. If the writer would only take the trouble to sit between two stout women in a crowded street car he would perhaps stop asking such silly questions.—London Punch.

Seek Origin of Granite.

Two Harvard geologists, Professors Reginald A. Daly and Charles Palache, accompanied by Dr. G. A. F. Molengraaf, a Dutch scientist, plan to spend the early months of 1922 in an expedition to South Africa to study unusual geological formations in that region, the university announced recently.

Dr. Fred E. Wright, petrologist of the geo physical laboratory at Washington, will accompany the party as the representative of the Carnegie institution.

The chief object of the scientists, who plan to leave England next January, will be the study of a body of obtrusive rock north of Pretoria, and they hope that their investigations will shed some light on the origin of granite, which has long perplexed geologists.

Dr. Molengraaf was formerly chief geologist of the Transvaal republic. He has also done considerable work in the East Indies.

Photography as a Sculptor.

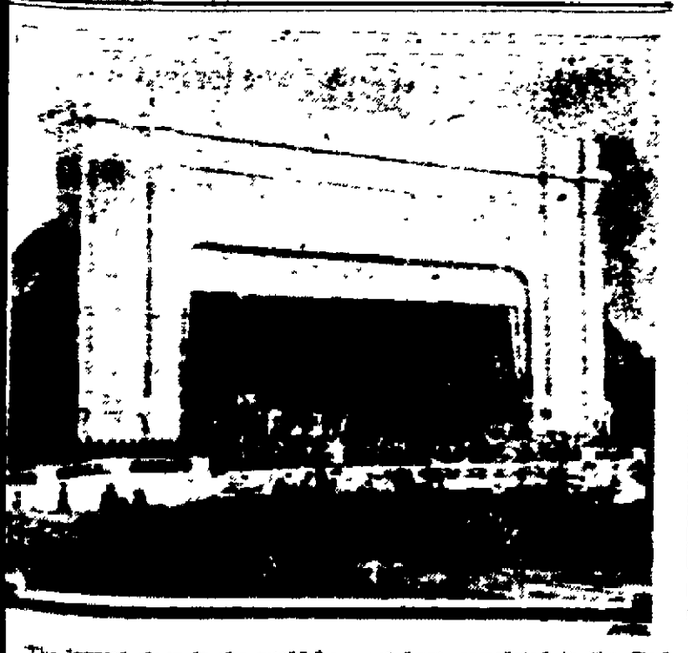
Baese, of Florence, Italy, invented a process for producing bas-reliefs by photography. The basis of the invention is the property possessed by a film of chromium gelatin of swelling in proportion to the intensity of the light falling upon it. The swelling is greater with low than with high intensity, so that the light passing through a photographic negative produces upon a chromium-gelatin plate a positive in distinct relief. The transparency of an ordinary negative, however, is not truly proportional to the relief of the original method, but by an ingenious automatic device, involving a double exposure, this difficulty is avoided and a negative is obtained having its lights and shades correctly graded to produce the effect of relief.

Coal Cools Do More Work.

Based upon the performance of 60 large locomotives operating over nearly 200 miles of route on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway, and on other facts of record, it has been estimated that the passenger and revenue freight tonnage of the United States could be hauled by electric locomotives for one-third the coal now burned under steam-engine boilers.

Salt and Gasoline.

Gasoline used in combination with salt is a good dry cleaner, salt absorbs the oiliness of the gasoline, as well as exciting into the fully boiled glycerin. Dip the cloth first in the gasoline and then take up a little salt before rubbing commences.



The largest stage in the world has just been completed in the Hall of the University of Washington, where "The Wayfarer," the Pageant Play will be produced. There will be 5,000 in the cast. The stage is 300 feet long and 80 feet wide. Over 100,000 people saw the performances.

HOW

DREADED "SLEEPING SICKNESS" MAY BE AVOIDED.—The British ministry of health has issued a bulletin on encephalitis lethargica (commonly but erroneously called "sleeping sickness") to which it appends the following advice as to precautions to be taken against it:

"The other occupants of a house in which a case of encephalitis has occurred or is being created may be assured that the disease is one of low infectivity, and that very little risk is run by association with the patient. At the same time it is desirable that such association should be limited to what is necessary for proper care and nursing, and the patient should be well isolated in a separate room.

"School children in the affected household may be kept from school, as a precautionary measure, for three weeks after the isolation of the patient. Those in contact with the case should be advised to use antiseptic nasal sprays or douches and to gargle the throat with solutions such as those advised for influenza.

"For example, any of the following may be used: (1) 1 per cent solution of peroxide of hydrogen; (2) a solution of permanganate of potash, 1 in 5,000 in .06 per cent solution of chloride of sodium (common salt); (3) liquor sodae chlorinatae, 0.5 per cent. These solutions can be used as ordinary gargles or snuffed up the nostrils or applied by an efficient spray.

"It is desirable that any persons in the infected household who suffer from sore throat or other symptoms suggesting an abortive attack should be treated from this point of view and isolated as far as possible until they have recovered. The sick room should be thoroughly cleansed and disinfected at the end of the illness."—Buffalo Express.

How Carbuncle Should Be Treated to Effect Cure That Can Be Considered Thorough.

At a recent examination by the state board of Ohio, medical students were asked how they would treat a carbuncle. The official answer is quoted from Rose & Carless' Manual of Surgery, as follows:

"The most thorough and satisfactory is to lay the carbuncle freely open under an anesthetic and scrape with a sharp spoon or cut away all sloughs until healthy tissue is reached, and then to disinfect the cavity thoroughly with pure carbolic acid or peroxide of hydrogen (10 volumes). The hollow thus formed is packed with gauze soaked in an iodoform emulsion (10 per cent.) and allowed to heal by granulation. Good food, iron, quinine and alcohol according to judgment, must be administered, while appropriate medicine (e. g., codeine or opium) and limitations of diet are necessary in diabetic patients."

How Sand Is Traveling.

French geologists have long taken interest in the eastward march of the sands along the northern coasts of France, Belgium and Holland, says the Christian Science Monitor. A fine sand originating on the shores of Normandy has been found distributed on the beaches as far east as Denmark. It was shown, after a careful investigation of this phenomenon, that the eastward march of the sands is due to the fact that all the sea waves approaching the coast from Brittany break in nearly parallel lines, with an easterly motion. The result is that the sands always progress in that direction. But the process is slow and gradual, and measurements have proved that the sand traverses, forward and backward, perpendicular to the shore, a total distance 8,000 times as great as that which it covers, in the same length of time, in its eastward progress.

How Life May Be Prolonged.

The publication of a monumental work by Viscount Bryce at the ripe age of eighty-three should persuade many of us who want to feel what it is like to be an octogenarian that old age can be attained without the aid of thyroid glands borrowed from the monkey. One of the secrets of old age would seem to be a lifetime of intellectual activity, and a lion's share of public service. It is quite astonishing the number of public men living at the present day who have passed their eightieth birthday. Lord Channing is in his eighty-first year. Viscount Morey is eighty-three, Mr. Frederic Harrison is close on ninety, Sir Harry Poland is still a vigorous letter writer, ninety-one, while the earl of Halsbury is ninety-seven, and possibly there are others.—London Chronicle.

TURKS MURDER 700,000 GREEKS

Charge is Made by Legation at Washington.

KILLINGS AND DEPORTATIONS

These, With Famine, Said to Have Been Responsible for the Tragedy in Asia Minor—Work of Extermination of Entire Peaceful Population is Pursued Right Before the Eyes of a Civilized World—Complain of Violations of Interallied Regulations.

Nearly 700,000 Greeks have been massacred, deported, or have died of famine since the war with Turkey began, according to a statement given out by the Greek legation at Washington. Half of these victims are said to have been Greeks of Pontus and the others were from the interior of Asia Minor. Part of the statement follows:

Tell of Persecution.

"American travelers and others just arriving here from Samsoun, said a dispatch from Constantinople, report horrible details of the persecution of Christian populations in that region. The notorious murderous chief, Osman Agha, arrived at Samsoun the second day of Bairam, a Turkish holiday similar to Easter, inaugurating his entry by the murder of ten Greeks. Then, surrounding the stores of the American Tobacco company, he arrested all the Greek clerks, numbering about 800, and had them transported to an unknown destination. The Greek quarter was then surrounded and 1,500 other Greeks arrested and deported to the interior.

The population of 30 other villages in the Samsoun region were massacred while they were being transported to the place of exile. The Turkish authorities prohibited the use of the waters of the rivers contaminated by the bodies. Other villages, having refused to comply with the deportation order, were set on fire by the Turks, and the inhabitants, regardless of age and sex, were killed.

Burned Bones as Evidence.

"The American commission which went to this place reported these crimes and brought back burned bones, which were shown to the Turkish governor.

Since the beginning of the war the Turks have exterminated by massacres, deportations and through famine more than 350,000 Greeks of the Pont (Pontus, district of Asia Minor bordering on the Black sea) and as many other Greeks from the interior of Asia Minor. This work of extermination of an entire peaceful population is pursued right before the eyes of a civilized world.

"The Ecumenic Patriarchate is much worried by reports which are constantly coming in from the Metropolitans, regarding massacres and persecution of Greeks in the interior. The Patriarchate is preparing for the British high commissioner a long memorandum showing in detail the Turkish crimes. At the same time the Patriarchate will call the attention of the interallied authorities to violations by the Turks of the regulations laid down by the interallied control at Constantinople in the arrest of Greeks coming from Ismid and other localities of Marmora, under the pretext that they had participated in activities against the Turks."

COW RECOGNIZES OWNER

Animal's Knowing Woman Decides Case in California Court.

The interesting case of a Holstein cow that strayed from its owner last December and whose ownership was disputed, has been settled in Judge Douglass' court at Manteca, Cal. The cow in question was claimed by Mrs. Eva Gustafson. Last December it wandered into the herd of Manuel Silveira, a dairyman on an adjoining farm. Silveira believed that the cow belonged to his herd and refused to allow it to be taken away.

The matter was brought to trial and in order to satisfy himself and those present that the cow rightfully belonged to Mrs. Gustafson, Constable J. W. Graves asked her to go up to the animal. The cow apparently had a good memory for faces and a kindly remembrance for her rightful owner. At least it allowed itself to be petted by Mrs. Gustafson, but could not be approached by Silveira or the constable.

The cow has been delivered to Mrs. Gustafson.

Twenty Sees U. S.-British War.

A naval war between the United States and Great Britain as a result of maritime rivalry will occur in 1924, according to a prediction made by Leon Trotzky in addressing the Third Internationale at Moscow, says a dispatch to the London Daily Herald, the labor organ, from Moscow. "A socialist government," was Trotzky's description of the United States, while he declared that Great Britain was losing her position of world significance, "the pound sterling having been vanquished by the almighty dollar."

Catches Fish From Cot.

John Monforte, Moo Sing Inmate, fishing through the prison bars, caught a 12-pound carp. Guards had to open a cell and help Monforte land the fish.

Shorty Sheep.

"I believe I'll go over and examine them sheep of Jones's a little more close-ly," said Mr. T—— to his wife; he's offered three of 'em for that yeller heifer, but I cannot 'bide as I do I aim to be sure I'm be gein her that there three ain't half eaten 'round of all hull."—Tourist Companion.

GROWING CROPS IN ORCHARDS

One of the difficulties of fruit growing, either as a main industry or as an incidental to general farming, is the length of time that must elapse before the orchard begins to yield returns. When, as in many sections in spring, a freeze destroys or greatly reduces the expected crop, the loss to many growers, including those who expected to harvest their first fruit in 1921, is likely to be serious. The loss under some conditions can be partly offset and other benefits can be gained by growing vegetable crops between the rows of young fruit trees, say specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Experienced orchardists frequently find it advantageous to grow crops between the tree rows until the trees reach bearing age. After bearing begins it is impracticable to "double-crop" an orchard. As a rule, intercropping cannot be practiced in a peach orchard after the third season from planting. Six to eight years is usually the limit for an apple orchard, the exact time depending on the variety, vigor and growth, and other factors. Further, the trees will usually shade the ground too much for the growing of vegetable crops by the time the ages mentioned are reached.

In an "off year," with an orchard that is expected to come into bearing for the first time, many fruit growers will find it to their advantage to plant crops of potatoes, corn, soy beans, cowpeas, shell-beans, or sweet potatoes in states where they can be raised between the orchard rows. The growing of potatoes, however, in an orchard in the "northern fruit belt" is a doubtful practice, since the digging of them amounts practically to a late cultivation of the ground, and under some conditions this might stimulate a late growth of the trees, which would be undesirable. In this way the farmer can utilize about half the space of his orchard land without injury to the trees or seriously hampering the temporary crop. Tomatoes and other truck crops may also be grown in the orchard. These are sometimes classed as "catch crops"—crops planted for a quick growth.

Where such catch crops are planted it is well first to make a hasty survey of the operations of other farmers in the vicinity and of the available market, since often where similar conditions prevail throughout an entire locality there is a tendency for many farmers to enter on a certain line of temporary agriculture, with the result that the supply far exceeds the local demand. A little foresight may prevent disappointment.

These rows between the trees are somewhat more difficult to cultivate than in the open field, and may require considerable handwork, but in many cases the crops which are planted yield a comfortable profit.

The intercropping of young orchards has an additional purpose besides the mere direct financial gain. It furnishes an incentive to keep the orchard cultivated, and as a rule this is highly desirable from the standpoint of the trees.

An off year furnishes a good time to put the orchard in order by close pruning, such as the orchardist could not easily afford if it meant reduction in bearing surface.

Profit may sometimes be found in a sowed crop. Buckwheat is often a good thing when sowed among young trees. The buckwheat may not pay in harvest for grain, but if mowed before fully mature it makes a good mulch, or if permitted to mature enough grain may be obtained to materially cut down the expenditure for poultry feed. Buckwheat can be sown in June or even in July and still make a satisfactory growth. Field peas, cowpeas and various other crops that make good forage can be used as cover crops, and the soil be improved thereby.

The fruit grower should realize that it is the above rather than the use of double-cropping systems that may result adversely to the trees. And again, an interplanted crop which is to be harvested and not used entirely for soil improvement should be looked upon as a means of reducing the expense of maintaining the trees rather than a crop which represents a definite cash income.

The Dark Ages.

The term dark ages is the term applied to that portion of the Middle ages which resulted from the decline of classical learning in the renaissance. It embraces the period from the Fifth to the Fifteenth, or more reasonably, from the Fifth to the Eleventh century.

BOY SCOUTS

(Conducted by National Council of the Boy Scouts of America.)

SCOUTING AND LOYALTY

A boy is naturally a loyal young animal. He will stick to his "gang" through thick and thin, will never "go back" on a chum, no matter at what cost to himself, and scouting, dealing as usual with fundamental boy instincts, makes use of this natural tendency, turns it to constructive ends. In scouting, boy loyalty is both taken account of and developed. Loyalty to the patrol, the troop, the scoutmaster, go over into loyalty to the community, to home and church and school, to God and country as pledged by the scout oath.

No one who has ever seen a troop of boy scouts taking the oath of allegiance to the flag, grave, earnest, sincere, can doubt that here are Americans in the making to whom the Stars and Stripes are not merely a strip of gay-colored bunting, but stand for something real and true, something worth dying for, if need be.

Scouts are being trained in citizenship which means not only that they know the history of this country and how its laws are made, but that they stand ready to serve the nation in whatever ways a boy may. Co-operating in a nation-wide Forest Protection week, as they did in May last, fighting forest fires, planting trees, aiding in city clean-ups and health surveys, fighting gypsy moths and bagworms and fungus blights, sharing in efforts at wild life conservation, aiding the police in directing traffic, serving as fireman's aides, etc., they are practicing citizenship here and now, are learning it, by living it, day by day.

Everywhere we are seeing today war's dangerous aftermath of lawlessness, especially among our youth. Scouting offers one of the best antidotes for this ill, for a scout stands for law and order. Scouts learn to obey, not as "blind driven cattle," but as good citizens who recognize the necessity and reasonableness of law. A scout executive in West Virginia recently examined the court records of his town for ten years back and found that not a single scout or a boy under scout influence had ever passed through the court, and similar records are every now and then reported from various parts of the country. A scout is loyal—too loyal to be a law breaker.

Ours is a great country and has great problems to meet. No one can tell what the next few years will hold, but we can be sure of one thing, that no nation can be stronger than its men, and that every bit of splendid volunteer leadership in the work of making men "physically strong, mentally awake, morally straight," will count immeasurably for good and as the best sort of patriotic service. "Save a man, you save one person. Save a boy, you save a whole multiplication table."

HEROIC WORK IN PUEBLO FLOOD

Among the many instances of heroic service in rescue work during the Pueblo flood disasters, that of two boy scouts stands out conspicuously. On hearing that a man and his young son were trapped in a burning building, surrounded by the ever rising tides of onrushing water, they hastily manned a lifeboat and pulled through the dangerous current to the burning building. The owner of the place and his son were rescued with great risk, not only because of the floods but because the burning building was being shaken by terrific explosions all the time from the lime stored therein. Having discovered that three employees were also in the burning plant, the scouts returned a second time, battling desperately with the waters, and got the other victims also to safety. Hardly had they gotten into the boat when another more violent explosion occurred and the building crumbled and fell into the water.

MOTHER DESERVES GOOD TURN

A Washington, D. C., Scoutmaster in speaking of the good turn says: "One fellow more entitled to our good turn and courtesy and loving consideration than any other is MOTHER. She has done a whole lot for us. On our account she has given up parties and pleasures, pretty dresses, warm coats and new hats. She has sat up nights to care for us or mend our clothes. She has worked and prayed for us, in fact there doesn't seem to be anything she has not done for us and we can't even half repay her. Any scout who lets a whole day pass without doing something to make mother glad is a scout who fails to live up to the standard of Troop 33."

DO PRACTICAL MAP WORK.

One of the requirements for a first class boy scout is to be able to read a map correctly, and draw, from field notes made on the spot, an intelligible rough sketch map, indicating by their proper marks important buildings, roads, valley lines, main landmarks, principal elevations, etc. All this involves no small amount of practical skill and field work and in many places map-work classes are conducted for scouts.

Use for Clocks.

The small, wind-up clock can be useful in the sickroom if the face is well lighted. After a dose of medicine is given the hands should be turned to denote the time when the next one is due.

Mary Pickford

Mary Pickford is seen here as Little Lord Fauntleroy, the role she is playing in a new movie production now being filmed.

Style in Writing.

In style, as in other things, it is well always to aim at the combination of as many excellences as possible—opposite excellences, it may be—those other beauties of prose. A busy age will hardly educate its writers in correctness. Let its writers take time to write English more as a learned language; and completing that correction of style which had only gone a certain way in the last century, raise the general level of language towards their own.—Pater.

SISSON FOR WIDER STORM KING ROAD

A delegation from the Ulster County Automobile Club was present Tuesday when State Highway Commissioner Herbert F. Sisson, First Deputy Sayre and Commissioner Partridge of the Interstate Park made an inspection of the new Storm King highway, which, when completed, will link up the existing highways on the western bank of the Hudson, making a continuous river road on the west bank. Those present from Kingston were President William R. Harrison, of the Automobile Club, Secretary Meinhardt, Alonzo Winne, Chris Winne, Elva Bogart and S. D. M. Hudson, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce.

A meeting was held at the Palatine Hotel at Newburgh, where the visitors were the guests of the Newburgh Automobile Club. Commissioner Sisson addressed members of chambers of commerce and automobile clubs of Peekskill, Newburgh, Middletown, Poughkeepsie and Kingston before visiting the highway in Cornwall with Contractor John L. Hayes, who blasted the new roadway around Storm King Mountain where it skirts the cliff above the Hudson river.

In his talk to the business men Commissioner Sisson said he could not substitute concrete pavement for macadam without enactment of the legislature, but that he would do what he could to widen the roadway to eighteen feet. When this famous highway is completed the automobile route from New York to Newburgh on the west shore of the Hudson will be shortened about twenty miles.

FRENCH CHANGE SILESIAN TACTICS

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Berlin, Aug. 10—The French have begun to concentrate reinforcements in the Rhineland with the evident intention of enforcing the Upper Silesian decision upon Germany by pressure against the Ruhr, said a dispatch from Frankfort today.

Two new regiments of negro troops have arrived at Mayence, headquarters of the French army of occupation on the Rhine and other troops are arriving in the regions of Saar and Trier.

The French have already threatened to occupy the Ruhr if Germany balks at accepting the Silesian decision.

AUTO HIT TRUCK AT BAD CORNER

In making the turn from East Strand into Broadway at the Connelly drug store corner about 1 o'clock today a young man named Bence from Ulster Park bumped head-on into the rear of a truck of Archie Winter's express standing not far from the corner, this truck being pushed into the rear of another truck of the Winter express line. The damage was the bending of the mudgard on the Bence car and the front mudguard of the express truck when it rammed into the rear end of the truck that stood ahead of it.

The practice of parking autos too close to a corner like the corner of Broadway and East Strand is a dangerous one, that place being the scene of close calls quite frequently, as there is not room for an auto going up Broadway to pass between the parking autos and the trolley track.

COOLER WEATHER GOOD FOR CROPS

Weather conditions for the week ending August 9 were generally favorable for crop growth and farm operations except in the north where practically no rain fell and drought conditions are again serious, according to the summary of weather and crop conditions sent out from the Ithaca office of the weather bureau. Cooler weather prevailed during the week and minimum temperatures as low as 44 degrees occurred over the more elevated sections of the state. Generally heavy rains fell over the central and southern counties.

Crops, as a result, are about two weeks ahead of the average. The oat and barley harvest is about completed and thrashing is in progress. The yield of oats is generally reported as light. Corn continues good to excellent although the cool weather checked somewhat its unusually rapid development of the past several weeks. Late potatoes appear to be doing well except in the north. Buckwheat is in full bloom and looking fine. Pastures are generally improved except over the northern counties.

18 MILLION RUSSIANS STARVE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, Aug 10.—Eighteen millions of Russians are facing death in the famine district, according to the latest estimate received today from Riga.

The starvation zone is 300 miles long, stretching along the middle and lower Volga valleys.

The cholera cases now number 40,000.

Eighty per cent of the cholera victims are residents of towns. The population of the district infected with cholera is about 500,000.

It is believed that Russia, outside of the actual famine zone, has enough food to last six weeks.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Aug. 10.—There was little interest in the stock market in the early trading today and changes in prices continued irregular. U. S. Steel was off ¼ at 73⅝. Northern Pacific rose ⅛ to 75⅛. Famous Players was unchanged at 50. Mexican Petroleum receded ¼ to 102½. American Woolen declined ¼ to 63⅝. Pan-American Petroleum declined ¼ to 46⅝. Baldwin Locomotive advanced ½ to 75¼. Pacific Oil was unchanged at 34½. Atlantic Gulf declined ⅝ to 21¼. General Motors was off ⅛ at 10⅝. Great Northern preferred was up ¼ to 73¼.

Pressure on leading stocks increased during the first hour of trading, causing substantial losses in a number of issues. Mexican Petroleum became the weakest feature, falling over three points to 99½ and was followed on the decline by Pan-American Petroleum and General Asphalt. Kelly-Springfield Tire was also in supply falling over 1 point to 39¼. Weakness developed in a number of other quarters, Baltimore and Ohio becoming prominent and falling over 1 point to 36⅝. Baldwin after selling at 75¼ at the opening, yielded to 73¾. Studebaker sold down ¾ to 73¾ but later rallied to 74⅝. Fractional losses were sustained in many other leading railroads and industrials. Trading was extremely small. Atlantic Gulf continued under the influence of the unfavorable statement published this morning and yielded to 20½, a loss of more than 1 point.

The market closed nervous and unsettled; government bonds unchanged; railway and other bonds irregular.

was missing. Her dress was lying on the floor and the man's clothing she had worn when she came in January were missing from the closet where they had been placed. A note on the table stated that she was too unhappy to live longer at home and was going away.

Later the family received a letter stating that she intended to work as a waiter at the Kutcher boarding house at Monticello and to send any letters there addressed to "J. Brown." The correspondence since had been conducted in German.

"They are both crazy," said Mrs. Schimeck, "both Lena and Mary. Lena spent every cent she earned on Mary and was willing to do it again only she wanted to save money to buy a farm for herself. She said she could work harder and earn more money if she dressed like a man. Ever since she was a little girl she wanted to dress like a man. She used to put on her father's overcoat and any pants or coat she could find and say she was going to be a man when she grew up. And she's strong, too. She is good looking even with her hair cut short," and she displayed a duplicate of a photograph published in New York city newspapers of this morning. "That was her gypsy costume," she explained, "only she had a skirt to go with it that we made after she came here in January, and I thought she would give up pants altogether."

Among the exhibits produced in New York by Mary, the waitress, was a letter reading as follows:

"Kingston, N. Y., May 21, 1921.

"Dear Mary:

I am sorry to say what I have to. Will you please send me the ring with the name Schimeck, because Carolyn took it away from my father and my father got it for a present from his best friend. Our address is R. F. D. 2, Box 8, Kingston, N. Y. Please send it. I am sorry.

Your friend,

Edwin Schimeck.

P.S.—Hope this will reach you in best of health. Best regards from us all to you. Answer, please."

"You wrote that," said Edwin Schimeck, 16 years old, turning to his fifteen year old sister, Stephne, as the children read a morning newspaper which was taken to the house by a Freeman reporter.

"Why did you do it?" asked The Freeman reporter.

Stephne laughed and said she did write it and had signed her brother's name to it.

"Why did you do it?" asked The Freeman reporter.

"It belonged to my father and we wanted it back," replied the girl.

Meanwhile telegraph despatches from Monticello announce that "Jack Brown" is at Monticello, working in the Kutcher boarding house, where "he" denies even having heard of "Carolyn Schimeck," and says "he" came North three years ago from Tillery, North Carolina.

THROAT CUT IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Young Brooklyn Girl Gashed by Glass From Ear to Ear When Car Struck Post but Vital Artery Was Missed and After Many Stitches She is on Road to Recovery.

Miss Penelope Econoponly, aged 14, of Brooklyn, a Greek, had a most narrow escape from being killed on Tuesday afternoon at Stone Ridge, while riding in a Winton-Six touring car. In evading a Ford car coming out of a side road the driver of the Winton struck a post. Miss Econoponly, who was seated in the rear seat, was jolted forward when the car hit the post and her neck struck a small glass windshield that was at the back of the chauffeur, breaking the glass. She sustained a deep cut under her chin from ear to ear, the thyroid gland being cut as was the outside jugular veins and the glass even cut into the "Adam's apple." Besides she received cuts on the right side of her face. She bled considerably and first aid attention was given the wounds by a doctor at Stone Ridge, who after closing the wounds by bandages had her rushed to this city and the Kingston City Hospital. Dr. Frank Johnston went to the hospital with her and sewed up the cut in the throat, many stitches being required. The young lady stood the ordeal unflinchingly. She is being cared for by two nurses and it is expected to be able to go to her home in Brooklyn in a few days.

MULFORD DISCHARGED.

Was Accused of Violating Mullan-Gage Law.

At a hearing held before Justice Chidester Monday afternoon, in the case of C. Leslie Mulford of Saugerties, charged with violation of the Mullan-Gage law, Col. Raphael Eagan of Newburgh, William D. Brinnier, Sr., of this city and Grant M. Brinnier appeared as attorneys for Mulford. The district attorney's office was represented by Chris J. Flanagan of this city. Mulford's attorneys contended that the information upon which he was taken into custody was defective and did not charge the commission of a crime and that although Mulford's permit to sell wholesale had expired, he had made application for another which was pending and that U. S. Commissioner Collins of Newburgh had ruled that he was entitled to keep the liquors pending the granting of the application, and then moved for his discharge. Attorney Flanagan made an argument in opposition to the contention of Mulford's attorneys. At the conclusion of the argument, however, Justice Chidester granted the motion of Mulford's attorneys and he was discharged.

BEATS MARY'S FAMOUS LAMB

Woolly Lawn Mower Proved of Practical Value to Cincinnati Man During Hot Spell.

Louis Goecke, better known as "Pat" in amateur circles, was mowing the grass on the lawn of his home in Cincinnati recently. In the course of the work he was cutting alongside a hedge with a pair of clippers.

"Ba-a-a," came from the other side of the hedge.

Goecke looked up. A neighbor was sitting on the porch reading.

Goecke resumed his clipping.

"Ba-a-a!" sounded again.

Goecke straightened up and shot fierce glances at his neighbor. But the latter's face was concealed back of the newspaper.

The clipping proceeded, and then again came "Ba-a-a!"

Finally Goecke threw down his clippers, stepped to the neighbor's porch, and said:

"Are you guying me?"

The other looked up with surprise. "Guying you? Why, no! What makes you think so?"

"Well, stop that 'baa-ing!'" Goecke said.

"Oh, that's it. I'll show you what that is," and the neighbor went back among the bushes and pulled out a lamb. "I bought it yesterday," he explained.

Immediately Goecke was seized with an idea. "Lend it to me, will you?" he asked. The neighbor was obliging. The lamb finished the grass cutting job, and Goecke enjoyed the cool and quiet of a shady nook on his porch.

GREATEST IN PLAINS STATES

Matter of Farm Risks Established by Records Kept by the Department of Agriculture.

Risks in the production of three great staple crops—corn, wheat and oats—are greatest in the plains states, extending from Texas to North Dakota. This general fact is established by the average deviation of the yield per acre from the average yield, computed by the bureau of crop estimates, Department of Agriculture, for these three crops for each state from the records of 50 years.

On the other hand, the North Atlantic and the western states are regions of comparatively low risk, or deviation of yield per acre from the average, for wheat and oats, and the entire Atlantic coast and the west for corn.

The great corn belt, with its enormous production and surplus above local consumption, is, after all, prominently subject to risks of weather, insects and disease in the production of crops, and, while it would be going too far to say of this region as a whole that the results of its agriculture are either "a feast or a famine," yet there is a tendency in this direction as the area covered by the average becomes more restricted to county, township and individual farm.

Defense, Then Prosecution Rests.

Mr. Shanigan inserted his key quietly; walked softly, undressed silently and crept into bed.

All his precautions were in vain. Mrs. Shanigan had been awake listening and waiting for him. She told him she supposed he had been working at the office again; that she did not believe that story or any other he had ever told her; that she did not have to put up with him; that she could have a career; that even now the committee was waiting to see if she would accept the nomination for mayor; that she had been warned against him; that she was not now the foolish sentimental girl she was when she married him, and then a deep snore showed that—

The defense rested.

Now everyone knows the prosecution should rest first; so Mrs. Shanigan jabbed Mr. Shanigan with her elbow; shook him; fussed, fumed, scolded and wept; but it was no use. He slept on, soundly.

The prosecution also rested.—Katherine Negley, in Judge.

Primitive People.

The natives of St. Hilda, in the Hebrides, have decided to abandon a quaint custom which they have followed for more than a century, of electing their own queen. Hereafter they will take the natural descendant. They have deposed Queen Margot and will recognize Mary as their sovereign. This news comes as the first communication from the island since last September and was brought to London by a vessel which delivered census papers at the island. The natives there speak only Gaelic, but the census papers were printed in English. Otherwise the chief happenings on the island include an influenza epidemic, which caused many deaths. Persons aboard the ship who could converse with the natives said the chief question on the island was whether the war had broken out again.

Engineering Triumph.

A daring engineering feat was performed in Pittsburgh recently when a nine-story modern building, filled with hardware, was moved a distance of 75 feet by 12 laborers. Ninety-pound rails, 120 of them, made the tracks on which the structure was moved. The sidewalks and basement of the building, including a big engine and boiler that continued to function, went along with the building. Customers passed to and from the building as though nothing was happening.

Completely Educated.

"Meaning, I suppose, that she long ago found all the faults he has."—American Legion Weekly.

Proves Wisdom of Hesiod.

The many prove the wisdom of Hesiod, who says that the road to wickedness is smooth and very short, and there is no need of perspiring; but before virtue the immortal gods have placed the sweat of labor, and long and steep is the way thither, and rugged at first; but when you have reached the top, then, however difficult, it becomes easy.—Plato.

Worthiness.

A man can bear a world's contempt when he has that within him which says he's worthy.—Alexander Smith.

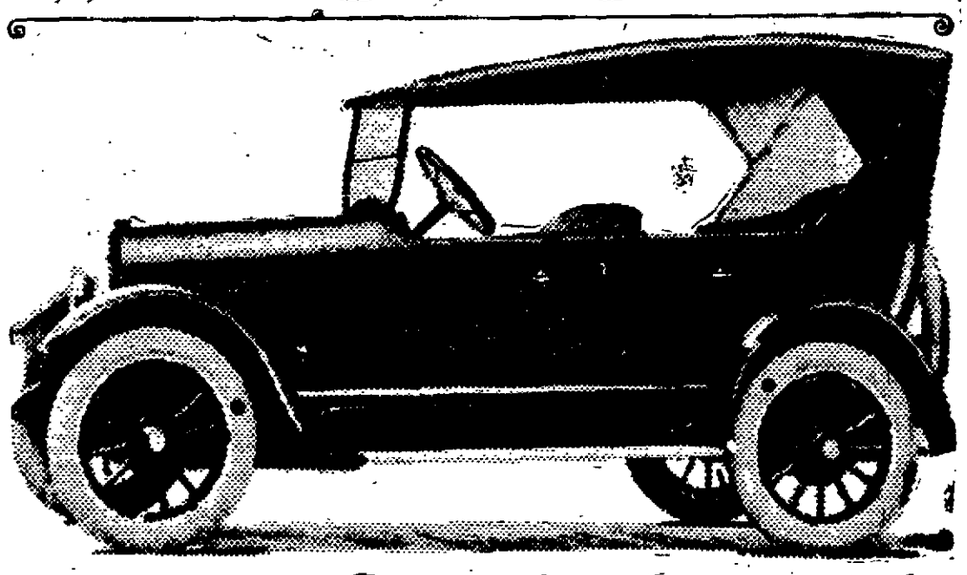
BUICK



Presenting
The New Buick Four

The new Buick Four is a distinctively Buick creation in every feature of design and construction. It embodies those principles of construction that have characterized Buick automobiles for more than twenty years.

The engine is of the famed Buick Valve-in-Head type. The bore is 3¾"—the stroke, 4½". Wheel base, 109", turning radius, 36'.

A Marvel carburetor with the new automatic heat control insures proper vaporization of the common low grade of commercial gasoline.

Multiple disc clutch, the transmission and universal joint are of standard Buick construction—the universal joint being lubricated from the transmission.

The rear axle is the three-quarter floating type, with semi-elliptical type springs front and rear. The frame is a deep channel section, strongly re-inforced with four cross members.

High pressure Alemite system provides lubrication. Delco equipment with Exide battery insures efficient starting, lighting and ignition.

All models have [illegible] —all are complete with tire carrier and extra rim. Closed models are equipped with adjustable windshield visors, windshield cleaner, dome light, ventilating windshield, adjustable windows, and sun shade in rear window.
